COL. RICHESON SEES ACCUSED SON IN PRISON

Thomas Varland Richeson, the aged father of the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, visited his son in the Charles Street Jail this afternoon, entering the prison at 1:40. The meeting between the aged Virginia tobacco planter and the clergyman accused of the murder of the former choir singer, Avis Linnell, was a most affecting one. It was the first time they had seen each other in seven years.

Frank H. Carter, with whom Richeson formerly lived in Cambridge, and one of the pillars of the Immanuel Baptist Church, of which Richeson is pastor, and another man, accompanied the elder Richeson to the prison.

A man who witnessed the meeting of the prisoner and his father said it was the most pathetic sight he ever saw. The father was trembling when he walked into the jail, and it was only by bringing that courage to bear that upheld him as a soldier through the Civil War that he was able to walk through the dreary corridor to the grated cell that held his boy.

When the father caught sight of the accused clergyman the agony of his heart was expressed in these words:

"My boy—oh, my boy!"

"Father—father!" cried the stalwart young man behind the prison bars. They both broke down and cried like children.

Father and Son Break Down.

After more than two hours had been required their composure. A conversation followed. The accused man was overheard to say:

"Father, I'm innocent—I'm innocent!"

The missing vial that contained the cyanide of potassium which killed Avis Linnell, and which it is charged was handed to her by Richeson was not buried in the grave of the girl at Hyannis as was suspected by the Boston police.

This fact was ascertained in the early hours to-day when the exhumed body of the girl and the clothing in which she was buried were carefully examined under the direction of Medical Examiner Leary. It was thought that the poison bottle, or the paper in which the poison was conveyed to the victim, might have been slipped into a pocket of the bathrobe the girl wore when she took the fatal draught.

This robe was wrapped about the girl over her white dress that was made for her wedding day, but was used for her shroud.

District Attorney Pelletier said that the vial had not been found and that there was no pocket in the bath robe. He said also that parts of the girl's body had been retained by the medical examiner so that a search might be made to ascertain whether another poison than cyanide of potassium might have been used.

Hunt Poison Bottle.

Detectives of Boston, however, their search to-day for the poison bottle. It is the missing link, the police admit, in the chain of evidence they hope connecting Richeson with the atrocious deed.

District Attorney Pelletier made this statement:

"Dr. Leary, the medical examiner, has reported to me that the container was found in the casket, and the bath robe or wrapper had no pocket.

"Some of the organs have been retained by the medical examiner for the purpose of eliminating the possibility that any other poison could have been used in association with the cyanide.

"The examination was made by Dr. Leary and his staff at the medical examiner's morgue early this morning. This time was chosen in order to avoid the disturbance likely to occur in the day time by reason of the gathering of a large number of vehicles."

Thomas Varland Richeson to-day conferred with Lawyer Philip R. Dunbar, and a line of defence was formulated for his son, the Rev. Mr. Richeson.

Father Fights for Son's Life.

District Attorney Pelletier summoned witnesses before the special grand jury to be convened to-morrow for the purpose of taking up the murder case. Mr. Pelletier will handle the case in person.

The aged father, who came from his Virginia home to take up the battle for the life of the clergyman, walked from the hotel along Tremont street to-day and entered the Mason street door of the Adams House, where he had breakfast. The tall, military looking man was not recognized, probably because he had visited a barber shop and had his beard trimmed until there was but a tiny tuft left on the lower lip.

After breakfast Colonel Richeson took a trip to Postoffice square, where he was joined by his son Douglas, a Chicago business man. They reached the office of Lawyer Dunbar at 10:15 o'clock.

A motion seeking representation at the examination of the exhumed body of Avis Linnell was filed with Judge Michael J. Murray by Philip R. Dunbar, counsel for the Rev. Mr. Richeson. Judge Murray has not yet made a reply. The motion was headed:

"A motion for an order authorizing representation at the examination of the body of the person alleged to have been murdered." The motion reads:

Wanted Experts Present.

"Now comes the defendant and says he is informed and believes that the prosecution is about to conduct an examination of the body and clothes of the body of the person alleged in the complaint to have been murdered. The defendant therefore prays for an order authorizing the defendant to be represented by counsel, counsel representative and experts, medical and toxicological, at such examination, with authority to make examination themselves on behalf of the defendant."

This motion was filed yesterday under the impression that the examination of the body and clothing would not be made until to-day. It was late last night and the body was shipped back to Hyannis for reburial early to-day. The defence was thus defeated in their attempt to be represented at the examination.

Judge Murray, it was learned, reached the conclusion to-day that he had no jurisdiction in the matter and further than that, if he had jurisdiction that he did not feel that he should grant the motion.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 25.—Facing the hard-hitting Philadelphia Athletics before a friendly host of home fans, the New York Giants made their last stand this afternoon to turn the tide of defeat which thrice rolled over them and capture the fifth game of the series for the championship of the baseball world. The weather was a trifle crisp, but the sun was bright and the skies clear.

MARQUARD HOPE OF GIANTS.

Rube Marquard, the Giants' southpaw, was the hope upon whom Mcgraw expected to pin his hope, while Connie Mack was undecided almost to the time of calling play, finally selecting Coombs.

The Polo Grounds were stormed by a mighty throng and early in the afternoon it looked as though the attendance would easily reach the 45,000 mark.

Marquard was roundly cheered as he rolled up to the gate in a taxicab.

Before entering the grounds he stopped to talk with a couple of friends and declared to them that he felt fit to pitch the game of his life.

"I figure that we have got just as much chance to win three straight games as they had, and while the odds are against us we'll do our best to come through with the goods at the finish. I have talked with every man on the team and they all feel the same way about it. There isn't a yellow streak in the bunch, and if we are licked we will take our medicine fighting."

The bleachers filled early, but the holders of grandstand seats, secure in the knowledge their reservations were made, took their time in facing the sharp breeze that swept the field and didn't begin to pour in force until half an hour before play began.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Athletics—Lord walked until the count was two and three, then shot a liner to left, Devore dove forward and made the most sensational catch of the season. Oldring got two strikes on him and broke his bat on a fast one which went on the ground to Doyle, resulting in an easy out at first. Collins let two bad ones go by and then died out to Snodgrass. NO RUNS.

Giants—Devore hit the first ball pitched on the ground to Barry, who threw to Davis for the out. Doyle hit a fast ball outside for a foul to Baker. Snodgrass was cheered when he came to the plate. He went out on a grounder, Baker to Davis, Barry making a nice pickup. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Athletics—Baker struck out on three fast ones and the crowd went wild. Murphy pulled a curve to left field for a single. Marquard threw to catch Murphy napping off first and it looked as if he was out, but Bill Dineen couldn't see it and the Giants kicked, but to no vail. With the count two and three on him, Davis let a fast one go by and was out on strikes. Murphy went down with the pitch and was doubled up, Meyers to Doyle. NO RUNS.

Giants—Murray struck out on a curved ball right over the plate. Connie fooled Merkle with a curve and he was called out on strikes. Herzog got Coombs in a hole, two and three, and then slugged to left. Herzog stole second on the first ball, Lapp making a low throw. Fletcher fanned on three fast ones—two of which were down at his feet. NO RUNS.

GLIDDEN CRASH; LEADER KILLED

TIFTON, Ga., Oct. 25.—The big Cunningham pacemaker in the Glidden tour turned turtle just outside Tifton, forty miles from Cordele, and S. M. Butler, chairman of the contest board, A. A. A., was killed instantly. P. J. Walker, mechanic, suffered a broken collar bone and Mrs. P. J. Walker a dislocated shoulder.

The tour is postponed indefinitely. The car struck a turn too fast, just before the driver could get control of it. It ran into a ditch and rolled over three times. Mr. Butler, who was in the front seat with the driver, Charles Kellman of Rochester, N. Y., was crushed underneath the car and never spoke again.

Mr. Butler was for years secretary of the Automobile Club of America, and for the past two years has been chairman of the American Automobile Association. He was immensely popular in automobile circles and lived in New York city.

Chairman Field is chairman of the executive committee of the Republican State Committee. The nomination of Charles G. Wood of New Bedford, appointed to the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, was also held up.

'ELIJAH' AGAIN UNDER ARREST

PORTLAND, Oct. 25.—The Rev. Frank W. Sandford, head of the Holy Ghost and Us Society of Shiloh, and the self-styled "Elijah," was brought here under arrest on a federal charge that through his project on the high seas Charles Hughey died on board the yacht Coronet on its trip here from South Africa, during which voyage seven of the passengers died of scurvy.

The arrest was made by United States Deputy Marshal Stevens, who went to Shiloh in an automobile, armed with two warrants sworn out against Sandford by Assistant United States District Attorney Chapman. He will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Bradley.

Two warrants were issued, one against him as head and executive officer of the Kingdom Yacht Club, owners of the yacht Coronet, and the other as master of the yacht Coronet.

The penalty for the first offence is a fine of not more than $10,000 and not more than ten years' imprisonment, or both, and for the second charge a fine of not more than $1,000 and imprisonment for not over five years, or both.

RICHESON LAWYERS LOSE FIGHT OVER BODY

Declared Prosecution Won Important Point in Frustrating Plans of the Defence.

reached Hyannis to-day at 10:30. It was placed in the undertaker's wagon and carried to the cemetery. The grave was still open and the box containing the casket was lowered and covered with earth. Undertaker Bradford opened the lid of the casket and looked at the face of the dead girl to make certain the identity of the dead girl. There was no ceremony. No relatives or friends were present. The wilted flowers that had lain on the grave were carefully replaced by the grave diggers.

When Lawyer Dunbar was seen and asked if there was any new developments in the case, he said:

New Friends Wanted.

"Nothing that I can give out. I should be very glad to give any information, as I desire to maintain cordial relations with the press. But really there is nothing to make known at this time.

"We should welcome any new friends for Pastor Richeson. Any more than this I do not feel it would be right for me to say."

Byron G. Nason, the schoolboy sweetheart of Avis Linnell, to-day issued a statement at Berlin, N. H., giving an account of his movements on October 13 and 14, the latter being the day that Avis Linnell was poisoned to death. This is his statement:

"I left Berlin, N. H., Friday, October 13, at 12:40, to go to Barnstable, Mass., to attend a case in court against Paine. I arrived in Boston about 8 p. m. and stayed at Young's Hotel that night, leaving Boston on the 7:38 train on the following morning for Bourne, Mass.

"I remained in Bourne that day until 7 p. m., settling up some business with Mr. Francis C. Green in regard to a clubhouse which I built last Summer. I arrived in Hyannis at 9 p. m., Saturday night, and remained at the State Normal School over Sunday. On Monday I attended the court at Barnstable and settled with Mr. Herman S. Harding for my time and expense relating to the trial. I first heard of the death of Miss Linnell on Sunday, October 15, while stopping at Hyannis.

The digging up of the body of the little choir singer from a grave on which the flowers were still fresh and its examination at midnight by medical experts under the direction of Medical Examiner Leary was one of the most remarkable features of this unique murder mystery.

Just what the prosecution sought in the examination of the body has not been fully disclosed. It was said that they were anxious to ascertain whether there was a bottle in the pocket of the bath robe that Avis Linnell wore when she took the fatal draught of poison and which had been wrapped about the body over what was intended as her wedding dress.

If anything was found on the body that would in any way help to clear the mystery of the murder, Medical Examiner Leary would not admit it. Dr. Leary today made this statement, after having declined to tell what the midnight examination disclosed:

"I know nothing of any desire of the defence in the Richeson case to be represented at the examination until I picked up a paper this morning. I was absolutely unconscious of any legal action by them in the premises or of their request to Judge Murray.

"Of course, I have no authority to order another autopsy. I do not think one is at all necessary. But further action in the premises is up to District Attorney Pelletier and I am fully confident he will give the defense full and free opportunity to become acquainted with all the facts we have obtained through the autopsy and the further examination. We have no desire to keep back anything from them."

The examination of the body was conducted with the utmost secrecy, and nobody was admitted to the morgue while Dr. Leary was at work. As far as could be learned Dr. Leary, Dr. Kendrick, his secretary, and Louis Pasco, superintendent of the morgue, were the only ones at the examination. Whether or not the medical specialists employed on the case were in attendance could not be learned.

It is known, however, that four men were admitted to the City Hospital grounds at midnight. Their names were refused to the reporters, but it is assumed they were Dr. Charles Sedgwick Minot, professor of embryology at Harvard; Dr. William J. Whitney, medico-legal expert chemist at Harvard; Dr. Alfred W. Haich, professor of chemical pathology at Tufts, and Dr. H. L. Emerson, expert on legal final analysis and author of a book on legal medicine. These are the four experts who have been called into the case by the prosecution.

Secret Autopsy?

Although Medical Examiner Leary denies that he personally performed an other autopsy upon the body of the Hyannis music student at the morgue early to-day, it is believed that one may have been performed by Louis Pasco, the morgue superintendent. The latter performs nearly all the autopsies upon the bodies of persons who die suddenly on the southern side of Suffolk County while the medical examiner in charge of the case, superintends the operation.

Every effort was made to keep the fact that even an examination of the body was to be made a secret. The body reached the morgue last night and was deposited in a room on the second floor. The key of the casket was turned over to Louis Pasco, who at that time denied he knew an examination of the body was planned.

Medical Examiner Leary arrived at the morgue at 12:35 o'clock this morning and Pasco and Dr. Kendrick were waiting for him. The morgue was dark except for a single light in the office on the first floor. Leary examined the body in one of the tumbler rooms in the morgue. The rotunda, the immense room in which under ordinary circumstance the autopsy would be conducted, was kept in darkness. Mr. Leary's automobile was hid behind the morgue and it was not known he was in the building until he tried to avoid the reporters by hastening out of the hospital grounds through the rear gate, leading into Albany street.

Dr. Leary remained at the morgue until 2:30 o'clock, when he departed for his home with his chauffeur. When questioned by an AMERICAN reporter he said:

"I have just completed an examination of the Linnell girl's body."

"What is the result of your examination?" he was asked.

"That I am not at liberty to tell you," replied Dr. Leary.

"Did you also examine the bathrobe which was buried with the body?" was the reporter's question.

"I did," replied the medical examiner.

"Did you find any bottle, paper or other receptacle from which Miss Linnell might have taken the cyanide which caused her death?" continued the reporter.

"I would much rather you wouldn't ask that question," said Dr. Leary. "The whole result of my examinations will be contained in the report I shall make to the district attorney later to-day."

"Did you perform an autopsy upon the body?" he was then asked.

"I did not," was the reply.

"What is going to be done with the body?"

"The body will be shipped back to Hyannis on the first train to-day. That is all I can tell you now."

The last meeting of Colonel Richeson and his son was in the hills of old Virginia. Colonel Richeson stood on the doorstep of the homestead at Amherst Courthouse. One hand was in the magnetic clasp of his son, the other placed affectionately on his shoulder.

They looked out over the broad tobacco fields of the Richeson land, the father telling the son again of his pride and faith in him, the son speaking words of filial devotion. Then the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson went away. His grizzled father watched him into the distance. Their lives ran in different channels.

The first word of the grave charge that had been brought against the minister came to his brother under dramatic circumstances.

Douglas Richeson is connected with a big department store on State street, Chicago. Last Friday evening he was at dinner with friends. The party was talking of a murder case in Denver, where a woman had been charged with killing her husband in a sanitarium.

Suddenly one of the diners interrupted, saying:

"There is a murder case in Boston that has twice as much mysterious features as that Denver affair. Some fellow named Richardson, I believe, is accused."

Then another of the party spoke up:

"No, not Richardson, it's Richeson, the same name as yours, Douglas. I've a paper upstairs in my room. I'll get it for you."

When the newspaper was produced, Douglas Richeson saw his brother's picture on the first page. He read a few words of the case and then the dinner party was hastily broken up.

Hurries to Pastor's Aid.

Douglas telegraphed his father at the old home, but Colonel Richeson had gone to Lynchburg, and he could get no reply. So he decided to come at once to Boston himself.

He packed a suitcase and took the first train here. When he arrived he found his father was expected soon, so he took no action toward helping his brother till they should have had a conference.

Colonel Richeson and Douglas had two long conferences and then the latter went to see the pastor in jail.

Father and son are convinced that the pastor is innocent. In the talks they have had neither has for a moment believed that he is guilty. They are ruefully and confidently planning to battle to the end to free the prisoner.

Miss Lillie Richeson, sister of the man charged with the murder of Avis Linnell, who came to Boston from Savanac Lake, N. Y., is stopping at the Parker House, where she has gone into seclusion. Two other sisters of Pastor Richeson are expected to reach Boston to-day. They are also nurses and studied in schools and hospitals in Philadelphia. They come to Boston convinced their brother is innocent and prepared to do everything in their power to see him free.

The Misses Russell and Lilly V. Richeson are graduates of the Orthopedic Hospital, who still practice their profession as nurses. A younger sister, Katherine, is the wife of Dr. Charles Matta, a member of the staff of the Howard Hospital, where she studied to be a nurse.

It is expected these will be a reunion of the Richeson family when the other two sisters reach Boston to-day. The father has received several letters of encouragement from his daughters, and it is expected they will meet to-day and decide what steps they will take to aid the son and brother. The father, it is thought, will be the only member of his family to see Pastor Richeson to-day, as the sisters will probably postpone their visit until to-morrow.

Grand Jury Sits To-morrow.

The grand jury will sit to-morrow to hear the testimony of witnesses presented by the government in the Linnell murder case. Among the witnesses who will be called to testify are expected to be Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Linnell, parents of the murdered girl; Mrs. William McLean and Mrs. Milton Chase, sisters of Avis Linnell; Miss Lucile Zeigler, Miss Hanscombe and several other young women of the Y. W. C. A. who were present when the girl's body was found in the Warrenton street building; Druggist Hahn of Newton, who declares he sold Pastor Richeson cyanide of potassium; Deputy Superintendent of Police Watts, Chief Inspector Dugan, Captain Magarr and Inspector John Mitchell of police headquarters, who handled the investigation.

"We are not going to show our hand to the defence," said one of the officials in charge of the prosecution.

"For that reason we are going to keep many of our witnesses in the background. One of those we will not bring forward at this time is the young woman who met Miss Linnell on Saturday afternoon and was told by her that Richeson had given her a headache powder.

"This girl is not a member of the Y. W. C. A., and when she is produced there will be a surprise for all."

As fortune has been played at Rev. Mr. Richeson's disposal and the best legal talent in the East will combine to match their wits against the mass of evidence secured by the police.

Ever since the arrest of Richeson, the private detective agency which was engaged in his interest has been securing evidence with which the defense hopes to offset the testimony now in the hands of the district attorney.

Everything the detectives have done has produced results beneficial to the prisoner until to-day. Judge Dunbar, senior counsel for the defense, is extremely well pleased.

The information already in its possession, the defense claims, will eliminate much of the information which has been given out. The defense confidently expects to establish an alibi for Pastor Richeson.

men which will be beyond the power of the prosecution to break down.

Did Avis Linnell take the cyanide of potassium, which caused her death, in a capsule? This question, asked by a prominent physician closely interested in the case, has added a new turn to the murder mystery, which may go a long way toward establishing the disappearance of the capsule from which Miss Linnell is supposed to have taken the poison. It would have been an easy matter to have ground the poison into a fine powder, placed it in a soluble capsule and given it to the girl without the latter having any suspicion as to what the capsule contained.

"No Other Suspect."

A capsule would require a certain time to dissolve in the stomach and this might explain why the girl lived so long in comparison with the short period in which potassium cyanide usually acts. Miss Linnell could easily have carried about either in her handbag or purse several of these capsules without even a paper wrapper.

Soluble capsules may easily be purchased at almost any drug store without the purchaser attracting any particular attention or suspicion. A gelatine capsule leaves no trace of its presence in the body after it has been taken.

Chief Inspector Dugan declares there is no "other suspect" in the murder of Avis Linnell.

To Account for Time.

Here is the daily timetable of the Rev. Mr. Richeson's movements as established both by the police and by the defense from the time during the evening of Tuesday, October 10, when he went to the drug store of William H. Hahn, No. 105 Union street, Newton Centre, and obtained the cyanide of potassium on the pretext that he wished to kill a dog:

THURSDAY, Oct. 12.—In the afternoon went to the residence of John F. Danskin on Magazine street, opposite his boarding place and called up the Young Women's Christian Association in Boston on the telephone. Talked for several minutes and was heard to make an appointment for the following Saturday afternoon. Was heard to say: "It's a long time to Saturday."

FRIDAY, Oct. 13.—Took the 10.07 a. m. train for Providence from the Back Bay station. From Providence went to Woonsocket by train, and from there to Harrisville and Pascoag, R. I., by trolley. Arrived at Pascoag at 2.20 p. m. Attended Sunday School rally and made principal address of the afternoon. Spoke from 3.20 to 4 o'clock. Remained in church until session was over, then until shortly before 5 o'clock, when he took a walk in company with the Rev. W. S. Turner, pastor of the Universalist Church at Pascoag.

At 5.15 returned to church, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Turner, and remained there until about 8:15, having supper in the church in the meantime. Walked with the Turners to a grocery store, where they bought a loaf of bread. He and Mr. Turner then went to the home of the Rev. Mr. Harvey, where he spent the night.

George Baker, a brakeman on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, who knew both Richeson and Miss Linnell, the latter from childhood, declares that between 4.30 and 5 o'clock on the afternoon of that same Friday, October 13, he saw the minister and the Linnell girl talking earnestly together at the Summer street entrance to the South Station. He watched them for ten minutes, he declares.

SATURDAY, Oct. 14.—Richeson left home of the Rev. Mr. Harvey in Pascoag at an early hour and took a car for Harrisville, from which place he went to Woonsocket and caught the 8.01 train, which is due at the Back Bay Station at 9.55.

It is declared that on that Saturday afternoon he took luncheon with Avis Linnell, Mrs. Moses G. Edmunds, mother of his fiancee, declares this to have been impossible as he spent practically all the afternoon at her home, No. 18 Devon road, Brookline. He was at the Edmunds home between 9:35 and 10 o'clock p. m. when he was called to the telephone and informed by Miss Lucille Zeigler at the Young Women's Christian Association home on Warrenton street that Avis Linnell was dead. Miss Zeigler says he asked:

"Why did you call me?" and a little later on, "Did she say anything?" Returned to his boarding place about 11 that night.

Preached Next Day.

SUNDAY, Oct. 15.—Preached at morning and evening service at the Immanuel Church. Made only an indirect reference to the death of a "young friend." After the evening service went to the home of his fiancee in Brookline. Made no reference to the death of Miss Linnell.

FROM MONDAY, OCT. 16, TO THURSDAY, OCT. 19.—Remained in seclusion at the Edmunds home. Refused to discuss the Linnell tragedy.

THURSDAY, OCT. 19.—In the afternoon went out in a closed carriage. Was driven to Boston. Called at a lawyer's office. Returned to Edmunds residence at 1:30 in the evening. Refused to answer questions of newspaper men.

FRIDAY, OCT. 20.—Was arrested in the Edmunds house at 7:15 a. m. Taken to police headquarters and booked on the charge of the murder of Avis Linnell. Was arraigned in the Municipal Court and pleaded not guilty. Date for the hearing set for October 31, the day on which he was to have been married to Miss Violet Edmunds.

TOUCHING SCENE AS BODY IS TAKEN FROM THE GRAVE

HYANNIS, Oct. 25.—Beside a yawning hole in the little cemetery at Hyannisport lay a mass of flowers, only half withered. On the face of one floral emblem could be read the words "Rest in Peace."

But there is no rest for the little body of Avis Linnell. It has been taken from the grave where loving hands had placed it and has gone to bear more testimony against its slayer.

Sad enough is the ruins of a loved one, but doubly terrible is the disturbance of its grave and the dragging out of its poor occupant. No member of Avis Linnell's family dared face the scene in the cemetery.

Anxious as they all are to fasten the guilt upon her murderer, they protested piteously against the further disparagement of a corpse already mutilated by the knife of the medical examiner.

"Do you want your daughter's murder to go unpunished? Are you not willing to do everything to avenge Avis? Then you must consent to the removal of the body to Boston."

Those were the arguments used by Captain Armstrong that, wrung a consent from the suffering parents of Avis Linnell.

The grave diggers were ready. Captain Amadee Armstrong of Boston Police Headquarters, after a long interview with Mrs. Linnell, gave the word and the opening of the burial place began.

It was slow, hard work. The moisture of the past week made the clay soggy and heavy and it resisted savagely the disturbance of the grave.

Coffin Brought Forth.

Everybody has witnessed the lowering of a coffin into a deep grave by long straps. The coffin of Avis Linnell, in its pine covering, lay deeply sunken in the moist earth which clung to it desperately. The straps were placed about it but it would not move.

The grave diggers called for assistance and Undertaker Myron Bradford and Frank E. Howard of Brockton lent a hand. Then it came up, an earth-stained, wet wooden box which was quickly placed in the wagon of Undertaker Bradford.

The exhuming had been witnessed by a mere dozen officers, reporters and grave diggers. Several women from neighboring houses were attracted by the tragic sight and came quite close to the Linnell grave.

The Linnell family have resumed their daily life as before the murder. Mr. and Mrs. Linnell and their daughters, Vita and Helen, drive into Hyannis because Dr. Harris, the family physician, had prescribed fresh air for Helen Linnell.

The carriage stopped at a drug store where Helen had a prescription filled. Helen, who is nearly fifteen years old, goes daily to the high school, walking through the woods by a path which was a favorite of Avis and Mr. Richeson.

CLASSMATE STILL RETAINS BELIEF IN ACCUSED MAN

Rev. J. P. Zetterval of the First Swedish Baptist Church, Worcester, was a classmate of Rev. Mr. Richeson at the Newton Theological Seminary. He said to-day:

"I was terribly shocked to hear that my fellow classmate is charged with murder of a young girl. I cannot believe it. When in school days he always dressed neatly, studied hard, and was in great demand as a supply pastor. I regard him very highly and will continue to do so until there is absolute proof of crime. I received an invitation for his wedding to Miss Edmunds and intended to accept."

"Other classmates of Rev. Mr. Richeson are Rev. Wes. J. Arvins, of the Holden Baptist church; Rev. B. C. Tompkinson of Southbridge and the Rev. John Keely of East Brookfield.

DYSPEPSIA-PROOF

How Any Meal Can Be Thoroughly Enjoyed by Any Stomach.

Costs You Nothing to Try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Men, sp'a rule, are first discovered by their enemies. Their antagonists turn on the searchlight, and the proof of merit will lie in being able to stand the flash.

It was only in this way that Mr. White ever knew that dyspepsia was one of Mr. Black's worst enemies. Sitting face to face at a two-by-four table, he handed his afflicted friend the bill of fare:

Oyster Cocktail. Stuffed Olives.
Mutton Clam Chowder.
Strained Gumbo.
Sirloin Steak with Mushrooms.
Roast Beef Hash.
Boiled Ox Tongue with Sauerkraut.
Lobster a la Newburg.
Baked Pork and Beans.
Combination Crab Salad.
Hot Mince Pie.
Pineapple Fritters.

Mr. White ordered a "little of each." Mr. Dyspepsia Black ordered crackers and a glass of milk. "I had such a big breakfast this morning," he said, "that I'll just take a bite to keep you company." But Mr. White could not be deceived. "I am afraid you can't stand the gleam, Mr. Black. Why don't you say you have dyspepsia and be done with it? You'll always have that hungry look anyhow as long as you have dyspepsia. Now listen. My stomach is just as bad condition as yours at one time. But now I can eat anything, at any time. For instance, this clam chowder or sirloin steak or even the lobster would be just as welcome to my stomach as your crackers and milk. You don't realize how this dyspepsia business is robbing you of your spirit, of your energy and ability to think quickly. I can't help notice it. You haven't the cheer and sociability you had three months ago. Now I'll tell you what to do," and thereat the cheerful Mr. White took a vial from his pocket and extracted a wee tablet. "There, there is a tablet that contains an ingredient, one grain of which digests 3,000 grains of food. For even the worst dyspeptic. It's the only thing that really gives relief. The reason is it relieves the stomach of nearly all the work it has to do, digests everything in the stomach and stimulates the gastric juice. I can't get along without them. They are Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. You can get them anywhere on earth for 50c a package.

Yes, it is true, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, absolutely stop heartburn, nausea, indigestion, dyspepsia of the worst type, sour stomach, bloaty feeling and all eructations and irritation, and freshen and invigorate the stomach. They cheer you up, and make you get all the good there is in your food. You will forget you ever had a stomach to worry you.

CARTERS REFUSE TO SHOW DOG WHICH ANNOYED RICHESON

But Landlady Declares the Animal Had Bothered the Accused Clergyman.

Police detectives working on the Richeson case renewed their efforts today in trying to ascertain if the Carters, with whom Richeson boarded at No. 147 Magazine street, Cambridge, ever had a dog.

The defence asserts that Richeson really intended to kill a dog at the Carter home when he bought the grains of strychnine, and that he told Druggist Hahn the truth.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Carter declared today that they had a dog in their home that annoyed Mr. Richeson. Mrs. Carter told a reporter that this dog so annoyed Richeson that he threatened to kill it. She further said that the animal has been in the Carter home for eight months.

The city clerk of Cambridge looked up the list of dog licenses and found that none had been issued for a dog at the Carter home. He informed the Cambridge police of the fact, and they will inquire why the Carters did not pay the required license fee.

Intimate friends of the Carters who have visited the Carter home several times recently declared that they had never seen a dog there, and that they never even heard the Carters had a dog until after Richeson's statements to Druggist Hahn became known.

Can't Photograph the Dog.

AMERICAN reporters with a photographer went to the Carter home and asked permission to take a picture of the "dog."

"I am doing just what Mr. Burns tells me and cannot let you take a picture of the dog unless you get his written consent," said Mrs. Carter.

A newspaperman called up Detective Robert Burns of the Burns Detective Agency, which is working for the defence, and told what Mrs. Carter had said.

"Call me up in an hour and I will fix it so you can get the dog's picture," said Burns.

When again called on the telephone Mr. Burns said:

"Carter just left here. I advised him to let you get a picture of the dog and he said as soon as he got home he would chase the dog out on the street so your photographer can snap him."

The newspapermen waited at the Carter home for five hours and at the end of that time were rewarded with the appearance of Mr. Carter.

"I fear I cannot let you take the dog's picture," he said.

"But, Mr. Burns said you would let us take it if we waited until you returned home," the reporters protested.

"Well, I can't help that. And besides, Mr. Burns told me not to let you take the dog's picture without first getting consent of our counsel."

Mrs. Carter called Mr. Carter into the house, telling him there was an important message for him.

A few minutes later a reporter rang the doorbell and a man in a long frock coat came to the door. It was thought that he was a Burns detective. He said the dog's picture could not be taken, but after questioned as to his authority in the matter, consented to take the Carters' request to Mr. Carter.

"Please tell him that many people doubt he has a dog and that if he permits us to take a picture everybody will be satisfied that he really has a dog. While the picture probably will be a poor one, it does not produce the dog until a day or two before it is required in court. People will believe a dog was obtained just for the occasion?" was the message accompanying the request.

Thomas Variand Richeson, father of accused pastor—Photograph posed specially for the Boston American.

The supposed detective did not return to the door, but Mrs. Carter put in appearance at another ring of the bell.

"I have talked with Mr. Burns and he said not to permit you to take the dog's picture," she said.

"Is there really a dog in the house?" she was asked.

"There is."

"Then to prove it will you merely let us see it?"

"No."

"How long have you had the dog?"

"It's a Male Dog."

"Eight months."

"Is it a male dog?"

"Yes."

"Did the dog annoy Mr. Richeson?"

"Yes, it did."

"Did Mr. Richeson threaten to kill it?"

"Yes," replied Mrs. Carter.

Henry E. Chase, real estate dealer in Cliftondale minute. From whom Carter declared he had bought the dog, denied that he had either sold or given a dog to the Carters.

HOW TO DESTROY THE DANDRUFF GERM

BY A SPECIALIST

That the dandruff germ is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is heir, as well as for baldness and premature gray hair, is a well known fact, but others do realize that it is also indirectly responsible for many of the worst cases of catarrh and consumption, we appreciate the importance of any agent that will destroy its power. We are, therefore, particularly pleased to give herewith the prescription which an eminent scientist states he has found, after repeated tests, to completely destroy the dandruff germ in from one to three applications. It will also almost immediately stop falling hair and it has in numerous cases produced a new hair growth after years of baldness. This prescription can be made up at home, or any druggist will put it up for you, 6 ounces Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavona de Compose, one-half drachm Menthol Crystals. Mix thoroughly, and after standing half an hour it is ready for use. Apply night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the fingertips. If you wish a perfumed, add half a teaspoonful of Tre-Kalo Perfume, which unites perfectly with the other ingredients. While this preparation is not a dye, it is guaranteed to restore gray hair to its original color.

CAUTION! Do not apply where hair is not desired and be sure to avoid tonics containing poisonous wood alcohol.

Some publishers, who presented this prescription to Rider-Jones Drug Co., Troy, N.Y., say they make up a large quantity every week for customers who have used such astonishing results from its use.

It isn't what you pay for advertising; it's what advertising pays you. Advertising that pays is the only cheap advertising; advertising that doesn't pay is dear at any price. Advertising in the AMERICAN pays best, therefore it is the cheapest.

V. T. Richeson preached a sermon on "Christian Excellencies."

At Sabbath evening service, when Avis Linnell had been dead twenty-four hours, Pastor Richeson preached on "The Blessed Forgiver."

These are the titles of his last two sermons at Immanuel Baptist Church, Cambridge. They were preached on October 15. The following Sabbath, which was last Sunday, the pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church was, as he is now, a prisoner in Charles street jail, held without bail on a charge of murdering Avis Linnell.

The AMERICAN publishes today, for the first time, the complete program of the service in Immanuel Church on the day following the murder.

In view of the charge made against this clergyman, of being the perpetrator of the foulest murder New England ever knew—a murder by agonizing poison of a sweet young girl, the service program of Pastor Richeson's last pulpit appearance is particularly interesting.

Immanuel Baptist Church issued every week, as many churches do, a four page folder, containing services for the current Sabbath, announcements for the week, the church organization and other pertinent matter. On the second page of the program for the week of October 15 is the final service for that day, as follows:

Mr. Frank H. Carter, teacher of the men's class.

Give some time each day to Bible study and make your questions in the class help full to all who hear you.

"Why Do You Call Me?"

At 10:30 that Sabbath morning Pastor Richeson stood in his pulpit and prepared to preach on the topic of "Christian Excellencies." It was about twelve hours before that Miss Lucille Zeigler, friend of the murdered girl, had finally managed to raise Pastor Richeson on the telephone, to tell him that the girl he had been engaged to was dead from poison.

"Why do you call me? Why don't you notify her folks? You have their names, haven't you?" is the answer which Miss Zeigler was amazed to get, according to the story she has told. Pastor Richeson sounded, prayed, read the Scriptures and administered generally to the spiritual needs of his flock, a flock all unsuspecting of the fearful charge which was to be laid against their leader before the week was out.

On the third page of the church folder appears the list of announcements of the week, as follows:

The Massachusetts Baptist Anniversaries held at First Baptist Church, Fall River, October 24-26. We are entitled to send delegates.

Our minister will preach morning and evening on next Sabbath day.

CLARENCE V. T. RICHESON, Minister.

One Error in Notice.

One announcement in particular stands out with striking effect. It is this one:

"Please give the names of any who are sick to the ushers, and our minister will call if he can be of service."

Miss Lucille Zeigler, if she reads this extract from the Immanuel Church notices, may wonder at it.

The final notice was slightly in error. It reads:

"Our minister will preach morning and evening on next Sabbath day."

He didn't.

RICHESON SAID IN 1910 THAT HE WAS SOON TO WED

WINDSOR, Vt., Oct. 25.—Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, the minister under arrest in Boston charged with the murder of Avis Linnell, was at one time candidate for the pastorate of the local Baptist church and preached here February 13, 1910.

At that time the parish informed Mr. Richeson that they were desirous of engaging a married pastor, and he informed them that he was not married at that time, but expected to be in a few months as he was engaged to a young woman.

He did not give the name of the woman, and so far as known no one asked him who she was. Mr. Richeson later notified the parish that he had decided not to come to Windsor.

GROOM IS HELD FOR ABDUCTION

Stephen M. Macbalan, twenty-six, of Whitinsville, was held in $500 at Dedham today on the charge of abducting Miss Alma Atanian, sixteen, of No. 66 Highland street, Needham.

When Macbalan notified his father-in-law of his marriage in Hoboken Saturday Mr. Atanian promptly secured a warrant for the groom's arrest. Macbalan says his father-in-law is angry because a child got make a gift of $1000 to the bride's father before marrying the girl.

Macbalan met his bride in Fall River Saturday, and they went to New York and were married in Hoboken by Bishop Karabanian on Sunday. They returned to his home in Whitinsville, where he is in the bakery business. Judge Grover set November 2 for a hearing on the case. They had been engaged for over a year.

SHOOTS SELF AS LOVE IS SPURNED

FALL RIVER, Oct. 25.—His love spurned by Miss Mildred Lufkin, fifteen years old, John Burns, twenty, of County street, Dartmouth, is dead at the Union Hospital here from a charge of shot in his head.

Burns's mother, Mrs. Patrick Casey, heard the shot and discovered her son in his room fatally wounded. The shotgun was beside him. His stepfather and brother believe that death was accidental, but Chief of Police Donahue of Somerset, who made an investigation, and Medical Examiner Thomas F. Gunning of this city say the case is one of suicide.

CUT OFF FREE COUPON AND MAIL TO-DAY

Here's good news for the man who wants help to discover a few scanty locks over that bald spot. Good news for the woman whose hair is falling where locks are too scanty to properly pin up her switch.

Good news for both men and women who find a small tuft of hair in their combs or brushes.

Good news for all with itching, burning scalps, with dandruff, with any and all forms of hair trouble.

The Crystolis Laboratories, 432 10th Av., Binghamton, N. Y., have secured the exclusive American rights for Crystolis, the famous English hair treatment.

Crystolis is a household word in Europe, where it is recommended by physicians, endorsed by clergymen, and is used by the aristocracy of the land. It has been in daily use for over a year now. Hundreds of men and women have already obtained almost unbelievable results from a few applications.

Now in a shipment of just a few of those who have used Crystolis have been convinced—and who will swear to the truth of their statements—are these:

Mr. Kelly of Memphis, bald for 26 years, says: "My head is now covered with hair nearly an inch long."

Mr. Hughes, a well-known writer: "Since using Crystolis my receding hairline has been restored to its middle all over my head."

Mr. Martin of St. Louis reports: "Once treatment made my lady two inches longer."

Mrs. Jones of Chicago writes: "I lost my hair shortly after my confinement. Was almost bald on crown. My head is now entirely covered with a rich growth full of beautiful color. Also my dandruff, no more falling hair, no more dandruff."

Mrs. Brown of Cleveland declares: "Crystolis is the most wonderful preparation ever put on the market. My Philadelphia orders after only a few weeks use of Crystolis are simply enormous."

Miss Lester of Louisville writes: "Your hair tonic is simply grand. My hair is now over an inch long."

Miss Jackson of New York reports: "My hair is now long enough to bob, and is more beautiful than ever before."

Mr. Arnott of Cleveland writes: "Losing scalp hair, and thereby dandruff, and incessant itching and falling hair."

Mrs. Wood of Rock Island writes: "Was almost bald in front, and now have a full head of hair. Two applications of Crystolis stopped itch. Now I have not a flake of dandruff."

You may be surprised with some of these cases, but remember that Crystolis is a scientific hair food that has been used over 150 million times in Europe with the most marvelous results.

Don't waste your time and money on the rest of a season; just mail Crystolis coupon to-day and you will be delighted. Write your name and address plainly and

NEW EXCUSE

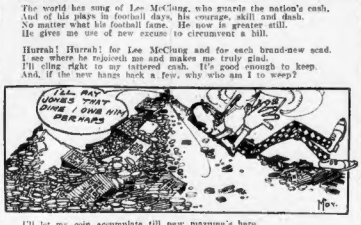
By MORTON BIRGE.

United States Treasurer McClung is to send Boston Sub-Treasury a supply of new money for the holidays.—News Item.

My money is so frayed and worn, I'd be ashamed myself
To offer cash that's more like trash than self-respecting pelf.
In payment of an honest debt. So everybody wait
Until the day that I can pay with money up-to-date.

The world hes sung of Lee McClung, who guards the nation's cash.
And of his plays in football days, his speed and dash.
No matter what his football fame. He now is greater still.
He gives me one of new excuse to circumvent a bill.

Hurrah! Hurrah! for Lee McClung and for each brand-new send.
I see where he rejoices me and makes me truly glad.
I'll cling right to my tattered cash. It's good enough to keep.
And, if the new hangs back a few, why who am I to weep?



I'll let my coin accumulate till new mazuma's here.
I'll neither spend, nor will I lend, nor pay a bill—no fear.
I'll wait until new money comes and I have seen it first.
And then I'll pay—I'll see—I may—there's time enough for that.

MARY ANDERSON IS GLAD TO SAIL

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Mary Anderson is going to leave us, and says she is glad of it. She sails to-morrow on the Friedrich der Grosse. Of course she says she had a perfectly beautiful time during the ten days she has devoted to rehearsals and first nights and receptions and dinners and past performance suppers.

"The production of The Garden of Allah has exceeded my wildest expectations," she said in the library of the Century Theatre, and not knowing that such a society would be painted or that those were any men in the world clever enough to so arrange colorings and properties as to achieve such effects. It isn't a little thing, you know, to reproduce the Sahara on a visiting card. You certainly have right here in Gotham the greatest scenic artists in the world.

"I have every one connected with the production has been so good and taken so deep an interest in the minutest detail and every one has been so beautifully appreciative that I am as happy as a child over it all.

Lonesome for Children.

Then she paused and smiled—just that kind of a smile. Her eyelids had lost that pensive little droop they had when she landed, the line in her cheeks was brighter and the ring in her voice corresponded perfectly with her smile.

Her black velvet frock, built on the severest principles, was relieved by a white collar and with many buttons of carved onyx, was slightly opened at the throat and finished with a sailor collar of heavy gold lace. Her gray gloves were immaculate.

"No, I am not sorry to be going home," she resumed, with another more tender, smile. "Two very powerful magnets are drawing me—my boy, who is at college at Glastenbury Abbey, and my little girl at home in Worcestershire with her governess. I have been away from them too long now. It's too sad you didn't bring them over with you so they could see the play," remarked one of the interviewers.

Miss Anderson shook her head. "I don't believe in dragging children about from one place to another," she said emphatically. "I think they should be rooted like little trees till they get their growth.

Greatness Comes Unsought.

"Have you any idea of becoming a play producer?" asked some one. "Don't you find that end of it tremendously fascinating?"

"Frankly speaking I should loathe it," she replied. "The work here has been delightful, I admit. In the first place it was a new experience for me. In the second place my co-workers were so clever and so willing to help me, and in the third place the conditions were ideal. Usually one gets in some unthought-of hitch or the company leaves one in the lurch at the last moment.

"The invitation is open to half hooded people, who have been sitting in the dark, to come to Constantinople, sure light, fine hair, bright hair, bright eyes, and a complexion that is clear and healthy. Just write to Dr. Richeme, 432 10th Av., Binghamton, N. Y. Write your name and address plainly.

"But in addition to the fact that the responsibility of producing a play is overwhelmingly big for any woman, I feel that whatever work I am to do now can be better done in a leisurely way and in quiet places. It is possible that Mr. Richeme and I may do another play together, but we have not as yet definitely planned it. In fact, I don't believe in definitely planning anything of an artistic nature. To be truly great it must come almost unsought. Studied efforts are seldom effecting.

"I remember once asking Hallman Day where he got the idea for his picture, 'The Light of the World,' and he replied that he thought it must have been born with him."

HUNT WOMAN IN POISON CASE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—Every effort is being made to-day to locate the whereabouts of Miss Florence Bromley, the alleged "woman in the case" in the McFarland-Wife poisoning mystery in Newark.

Miss Bromley ran out of her Vicin street home, jumped into a waiting automobile and was whisked away for parts unknown. Every effort was made to conceal her identity. She was muffled to the chin with heavy furs and her face was covered with a thick veil.

While it is thought that she may be going to Newark voluntarily for the purpose of facing her accusers and assisting in either the prosecution or defense of McFarland, the more general explanation is given that Mrs. Bromley is seeking some residence where she will not be subject to strict surveillance.

John H. Bromley, the father of the young woman, is also missing, and in view of the case with newspapermen. The family also refuses to answer any summons as a witness in the case. He joined with members of the family and A. T. Johnson, also of counsel for the family, by denying that there had been letters between Miss Bromley and McFarland. Prosecutor Mott for Trenton, made the report that he had gone there to make application in person for requisition papers for Miss Bromley's forced attendance at the hearing of McFarland at appointed time.

It is the final examination of the case on which Miss Bromley and Mrs. Dermott, counsel for McFarland, came to Philadelphia from Newark and held a conference with Miss Bromley, meeting a police, thus effecting the first exchange of messages between Miss Bromley and McFarland since the latter's arrest.

From the time of his arrival in this city Monday, Detective Frank Godfrey has had more or less difficulty in his efforts to reach Miss Bromley. When he has come he encountered the cross of evergreens in the local police, to whom months ago the father of the girl, who is a prominent secret society man, appealed, hoping that they interfere in the affair alleged to have existed between his daughter and the accused prisoner.

$2,000 IS LEFT TO FAITHFUL HORSE

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—A bequest of $2,000 for the care of an aged horse, with directions that the animal never shall be sold or worked, is contained in the will of Mrs. Ellen Mulvehill, who owned the horse for nearly seventeen years and was much attached to it. She left $170,000, much of which goes to charity.

SUFFRAGE TRAIN TO TOUR LAND

By GERTRUDE L. MARVIN.

Special Correspondent of AMERICAN at Suffrage Convention.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 25.—When the forty-third annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association adjourned, everybody, even the newspaper reporters, breathed a sigh of relief. Until the very last no one had been just sure "what might happen."

The international complication of the convention did not end with the election of officers. When the convention again assembled, rather wearily, in Legality Hall, the air had not cleared. If anything, it had rather thickened. Before elections everybody only suspected there was something they didn't know about. Afterward they knew.

There is a rumor that the reason for packing the five days of the convention an hour and a half was to keep slightly more than the business. They do say that the Call by-laws were framed to keep any possible dissatisfied people so busy that they would not have time to organize. And they almost succeeded. All except for one little star chamber session.

It was in a private room on the second floor of the Seelbach, the convention head quarters, and it had been kept very quiet, which made her particularly anxious to attend the meeting. So with another woman reporter from Chicago I went around there, and after having had time to see who were in the room and to hear a couple of remarks, we were summarily ejected.

Held Indignation Meeting.

There were some Virginia women in the room under the leadership of Miss Mary Johnson, the novelist, who remarked that this was "in short, an indignation meeting at the way things had gone."

There were some of the Illinois women who had not been consulted in the making up of the successful ticket which slid through the convention. They were under the leadership of Mrs. McCullough, the clever woman lawyer and rallying vice-president. Miss Kate Gordon of New Orleans, Brother retiring officer, was also indignant.

A few scattered delegates from Middle Western states who hadn't figured as conspicuously in the convention as their husband's rank warranted, made up the rest of the party. They had gathered secretly on tip toes, with bated breath and covert glances, to hear Mr. Bruce, a Los Angeles millionaire, who had been one of the chief speakers of the convention, tell them his vision.

Mr. Bruce is the man who organized the men all through California to help the women get the vote in the recent referendum campaign. He has been lionized all through the convention and no one seemed to know how he happened to address this particular little group. But he did, in ultra secret secrecy. When he came out we were waiting for him, and then part of the secret came out with him.

They are planning to fit out a suffrage train which shall whirl from State to State, carrying speakers, literature and propaganda work of all sorts. It is to be advertising on a grand scale.

Mrs. O'Connor Likes Boston.

It will be particularly valuable in connection with the national campaign next year, as doubtless these Western and Southern women want it for their own little get idea, with extensive stops in the eastern states. Evidently they want Mr. Bruley to manage it. But why we are worried about it at a suffrage convention?

This was not the only achievement of the day, however. At the business meeting, pledges from the State associations and from individuals all over the country amounted to $12,000. Mrs. Richard Y. Fitzgerald of Boston pledged $500 for Massachusetts, the largest sum given by any one State.

Mrs. T. P. O'Connor was a guest of honor during the day. She gave an address on "Let Our Watchword Be Unity." Mrs. O'Connor was received most enthusiastically and held an audience spellbound as she was leaving the hall. Everyone hurried up to shake hands.

Mrs. O'Connor is an alert, vigorous woman, with swinging gait, erect and a trim figure. She looks almost as young as her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Patrick Hoare of London, who was with her. Mrs. O'Connor says she thoroughly enjoyed Boston, shortly and that she recalls her visit there a couple of years ago with great pleasure.

"I think Boston people are delightful," she said, "especially those who are morning numbers. The street car conductors and workers are also having an air of cordiality that seems very gracious to the city."

The most exciting of the afternoon was a brilliant one. A bill was passed in spite of the admission fee which was charged when Mrs. Pankhurst spoke. Mrs. Pankhurst gave a tactful and interesting account of how the militant methods were gradually forced into militant methods, and she carried her appreciative Kentucky audience right along with her.

DELAY ACTION IN SHOE STRIKE

All overtures between the striking shoe cutters in Lynn and the Manufacturers' Association have been called off until next Monday. The shoe cutters' union has voted strike relief to 900 men now out and is prepared for a long fight. The union voted $7 a week to married men and $5 to single men until the strike is settled.

James W. Hitchings, representing the Luther S. Johnston Company, and Fred A. Trafton, for Williams & Clark, called up Master Workman Stephen Walsh of the shoe cutters last night and notified him that a number of the shoe manufacturers would like to meet the adjusters' board of the union. Mr. Walsh said his men would remain at Deawson Hall until 2 o'clock this morning to receive the manufacturers. Shortly before that hour Mr. Hitchings called by telephone and said that the manufacturers had decided to take no further action until after a meeting next Monday.

DARTMOUTH MAN FINED FOR THEFT

LEBANON, N. H., Oct. 25.—Harry W. Oliver, the former Dartmouth student, who was arrested for larceny in Hanover several months ago, pleaded guilty before Judge John M. Mitchell in Superior Court to three indictments charging the same offence. In presenting the case Attorney Adams begged the leniency of the court and presented a testimonial from the citizens of Natick, Mass., the home of the defendant, regarding the good character of the young man.

On each of the three indictments Mr. Oliver was asked to pay a fine of $100 and costs, and a suspended sentence of one year in jail during good behavior.

DINE WITHOUT KNIFE OR FORK

Eighty members of the Boston Life Underwriters' Association enjoyed a beefsteak dinner in the Dutch room at the Copley Square Hotel without the aid of knives or forks.

A business session preceded the dinner. Charles H. Flood, office manager of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company was elected president; Vernard B. Sweatt, first vice-president; Clarence C. Miller, second vice-president; Frank A. B. Stanton, secretary, and Francis Marsh, re-elected treasurer. The new executive committee elected was: J. H. Lake, John A. Yeoger, Leon F. Low, Harry G. Dixon, Winfield L. Nourse.

James Y. Barry, assistant secretary of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and former Insurance Commissioner of Michigan, made an interesting after-dinner speech, while Mr. Miller and Mr. Sweatt told of the national convention of underwriters held in Chicago.

Each member sat before a wooden box at the dinner, and the fun began when the waiters passed the steak on slices of toast. They followed, and gave, two courses, and a list of eatables all calling for dexterity in keeping one's fingers clean, since no cutlery was in use.

MRS. HUTCHINS SEEKS $4,000,000 ESTATE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Mrs. Rose Keeling Hutchins, wife of Stilson Hutchins, its new name and as next friend to her husband, began suit to-day against William J. Ingate, trustee of the Hutchins estate, to obtain possession of the estate. Charges of mismanagement are made against the trustee, and his removal is demanded on the ground that he failed to give an account of his stewardship. The estate, Mrs. Hutchins points out, is worth between $3,900,000 and $4,000,000, and the annual income amounts to more than $100,000.

BURGESS FLIES IN NEW PLANE

W. Starling Burgess to-day at Marblehead gave his new design hydroplane its first real test in a flight over the harbor.

With the wind at six miles an hour Mr. Burgess sent the plane skimming over the surface, first at low and then at high speed, the pontoon working well and throwing scarcely any spray at high speed. From the way the plane arose without trouble and the steadiness of the flight after reaching a height again on the water.

The Burgess hydroplane differs from the type in use in several respects. The pontoon is rounded at the bow, thus minimizing water resistance and making for greater safety in a strong sea. The entire machine is greatly strengthened by a truss.

On his afternoon flight Burgess took up two passengers.

CHINESE KILL LOYAL GENERAL

SHANGHAI, Oct. 25.—General Feng Kuo-chang, newly appointed Tartar general, was killed in a bomb explosion in Canton today, together with his wife and thirty soldiers. The bomb was thrown by a revolutionary adherent just as General Feng Kuo-chang arrived in the city.

General Feng Kuo-hsi had been sent to Canton to suppress disorders. Ching, who was assassinated several months ago.

Fighting between General Li Yuan Hung's rebel army and Imperial forces under General Chang Pu Wan was reported in dispatches received here. Those reports indicate that the rebels had taken the aggressive, throwing their forces against the main column of the imperial army at Seven Mile Creek, where they had retreated when they were defeated last week, and driven from the concessionary district of Hankow.

Captured by Rebels.

The city of Chenchow at the juncture of the Kia-Feng and Peking and Hankow railways has fallen into the hands of the revolutionaries. The rebels are believed to be marching on Kia-Feng, which is in Honan province, is situated on the Yellow River, 300 miles north of Hankow and is of great strategic importance, because of the facilities for rail and water communication.

Robonic plague has again broken out in Northern Manchuria and is ravaging the country with dreadful loss of life. This intelligence was received here today from incident with the entrance of 10,000 Japanese troops and entered the Manchurian province of Mukden. It is believed here that the Japanese invasion is peaceful and has been made at the invitation of the Chinese government.

Demanding Reforms.

A majority of the National Assembly formulated demands upon the throne for immediate radical reforms as the only possibility of averting the disruption of the empire.

The Assemblymen assert their conviction that the spending of the result through the entire South is available only by prompt steps to meet popular discontent. The Assembly will demand the immediate appointment of a truly responsible cabinet. This means that the Manchu princes and other incompetents will be removed and that Yuan Shih Kai will be made premier, with power to name his ministry. The Assembly demands the election of Parliament with full powers next year.

Whiskey for Colds

The Formula for Old Time Remedy Cured Thousands Here Last Winter.

The increased use of whiskey for colds is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. Mix as follows: "Two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Concentrated Pine compound. Put these into half a pint of good whiskey. Shake well and take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bed time." Smaller doses to children, according to age. This prescription is said to break up a cold in a day or two. Its ingredients, ought not to cost more than a dollar. Concentrated Pine. Each half ounce bottle comes in a sealed tin screw-top case. If druggist has not here it in stock he will quickly get it. Any druggist with cheap uncertain mixtures, is very risky.

BEGIN CRUSADE ON IMPURE FOOD

A vigorous crusade against all concerns guilty of selling impure food products, particularly milk and vinegar, was begun by the Board of Health to-day.

There have been numerous violations of the pure food law reported recently. Mayor Fitzgerald and the health officials have decided to suspend the licenses of those convicted for the first time and to revoke them for a second offence.

"I personally favor full sentences for these offences," said Mayor Fitzgerald to-day. "Automatically the big concerns do not mind fines of $10 and $15, but with the shadow of jail sentences hanging over them it would mean a cessation of the frauds."

INVENTOR'S TRIP INTERESTS MANY

By J. C. KERRISON.

The recent ten-day swing through the country of Charles Y. Knight, inventor of the silent Knight automobile engine, has served to bring to the surface the tremendous amount of interest in his famous engine in America, says J. H. Mackinnon.

Wherever Mr. Knight has stopped or lectured, he has been greeted by enthusiastic crowds, and from start to finish his tour, most of which was under the auspices of the F. B. Stearns Company, was a grand success.

Shortly after Mr. Knight's arrival in this country, during the last week in September, he addressed an enthusiastic audience at the Automobile Club of America, in New York City, and the following day spoke before the Society of Mechanical Engineers of Western Pennsylvania. Both of these meetings were arranged by the F. B. Stearns Company, and in each city Mr. Knight was entertained by the Stearns agents.

Morton H. Lunn, now in charge of the Velie branch in Chicago is making things hum in the automobile district on south Michigan avenue. Many original stunts were pulled off during the Fall Automobile Opening.

Lieutenant C. P. Rodgers, the coast to coast aviator for the $50,000 prize, arrived at Grand Park, swooping from his aeroplane into his official Velie car. He is riding in the car during his flights at Grand Park.

One of the interesting announcements of the week is the perfection of a self-starter by the Prest-O-Lite Company of Indianapolis. The automobile industry has been waiting for a long time for a practical self-starter, and although it was understood in manufacturing circles that the Prest-O-Lite Company had been experimenting along these lines for the past year and a half, the announcement is a surprise to the majority of the trade.

The Old Orchard Automobile Association, under whose auspices the races at Old Orchard, Me., were recently held, has filed articles of incorporation to promote and conduct automobile, motorcycle and aeroplane contests. The following officers have been chosen: Fred V. Goodwin, president; Walter J. Gilpatrick, secretary; Charles E. Goodwin, treasurer.

The 1912 four-cylinder Alco touring car was received in Boston by Manager George Hudson of the local agency of the American Locomotive Company yesterday morning, and its appearance is in keeping with the high quality of cars heretofore manufactured by this well-known New England makers. It has all the earmarks of the house of Alco, both in its material, construction, appointment and finish, in being what might be considered the very last note in automobile design.

Manager Hudson was somewhat concerned regarding the placing of the Alco on exhibition in his salesroom in Copley Square, as there is but one entrance to the same sufficiently wide enough to permit of the passage of the car. This entrance is to the elevator shaft, which at the present time is minus the elevator, so that in order to place a car on the salesroom floor it was necessary to bridge over the well, which was done, and the car placed in position, where it is being inspected by hundreds.

TOBACCO TRUST PLAN ATTACKED

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Louis D. Brandeis and Felix H. Levy, counsel for the combined tobacconists, have filed a petition with the Circuit Court, setting forth their objections to the disintegration plan of American Tobacco Company, and making various suggestions as to what should be done in dissolution of the company.

The petition states that no plan can be perfected to restore competition which does not include as an essential condition a provision that separate corporations or segments which are to carry forward the business of the trust shall at the outset and for a limited period hereafter be owned by absolutely distinct groups of individuals.

Common ownership of stock would make it certain that in fact there would be no real competition, say the petitioners.

PROCTOR LEAVES FUND TO EDUCATE CHILDREN

RUTLAND, Vt., Oct. 25.—The will of ex-Governor Herbert D. Proctor has been offered at the office of Judge A. G. Coolidge in this city. In addition to disposing of his large estate among his relatives and a few intimate friends, it establishes several trust funds, one of which provides for the assistance of Proctor young people who wish to secure higher instruction than the common school system affords. A desire is expressed that the controlling interest of the Vermont Marble Company, of which Governor Proctor was president, pass eventually into the hands of his son, Mortimer R. Proctor. To Frank Partridge, attorney for the Vermont Marble Company and a warm friend of the late Governor Proctor, there is a bequest of $25,000.

KEEP TAYLOR SYSTEM AT WATERTOWN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—A bombshell was dropped into the ranks of organized labor when Brigadier-General Crozier, Chief of Ordnance of the War Department, who was just returned from a tour of inspection of the arsenal at Watertown, Mass., announced that the first part of the Taylor system, relating to economic management, had proven satisfactory and would be introduced at four other government arsenals.

General Crozier stated the second portion of the Taylor system, relating to the wage scale and labor of the employees, would continue in use at Watertown for a time, at least.

'BLUE BIRD' IS A JOY PRODUCER

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

It was back to fairy days and other fantastic modes of life as the Shuberts strolled in and took the trip with Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," a play that made goodness of us all again.

The quest of the Blue Bird—or happiness, as it was conveniently explained on the program—gave a new sensation of delight to a house full of playgoers whose chief dramatic sustenance this season has been frothy musical comedy or dull melodrama. "The Blue Bird," with its fascinating story and still more fascinating people, scattered the spirit of youth about most generously, and how the grown-ups did reach for it!

It is the most attractive offering of the present season. "The Blue Bird," before the curtain rises, is promising fashion. If you chose your eyes to the future and could not take "The Blue Bird" for its face value you will discover that in the long run you will forget your sorrows and that life can be made wonderful indeed. If you follow the philosophy of Maeterlinck's interesting poetic drama.

A Refreshing Spectacle.

The theatre yields so much that is sound and sane, even in its moments of comedy, that a refreshing spectacle like "The Blue Bird" gives renewed hope to those who follow the theatre as a means of entertainment. But you must keep yourself to the healthy spirit of pantomime, was really no more wonderful than your own childhood when the world was big and your faith in fairies was unbounded. And then, when the world brought into flesh by his magic hat were the children who led him on a hunt for "The Blue Bird."

Scenically, "The Blue Bird" surpassed anything that has been given here for many months. There was a perfect panorama of illuminating spectacles, the most interesting of which was the kingdom of the future, where Tytyl and his sister Mytyl met those not born to labor in this world.

Father Time, admirably acted by Jere Deyrdon, presided over this land of spot, and ruled it with an iron hand.

Met the New Brother.

It was here that Tytyl met his little brother that had not yet appeared in the family circle, and if you can take the assets of childhood for it he will be the live wire of the household.

Maeterlinck made Tytyl a bold lad with an inclination to speechmaking, but he made him boyish, and Gertrude Hampden, who played the role, was continuously agreeable to look upon. It was an exceedingly risky part, nevertheless, and Miss Hampden made Tytyl to good advantage.

Helen Lackaye, who is gorgeous, golden Light, Alice Butler was a convincing Fairy Berylune and John Sutherland, as Bread, had some excuse for being a dough head.

"The Blue Bird" deserves success.

M'NAMARA MAY HAVE 14 JURORS

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 25.—It was said today that fourteen men would hear the McNamara case at Los Angeles. This is possible under California laws, which provide in addition to the regular jury that two others may be qualified in cases where the trial is to be of great importance and duration. These two must be kept with the main twelve, having equal opportunities to hear the evidence and in case any regular juror is disqualified through illness or death the next one of one of the two extra jurors is to be drawn from a box and be thereupon replace the disabled one.

The six jurors temporarily accepted by both sides were in the box to-day, and all of them are a subject and liable to peremptory challenge.

At the ex-tense conversation between R. W. Clark a veniremen, and Harry Chandler, assistant general manager of the Times-Mirror Co., owners and publishers of General Harrison Gray Otis, publisher of the Los Angeles Times, brought Clark's services as a prospective juror to an abrupt end when he told Darrow in open court: "The talesman was censured by Judge Bordwell for carelessness.

Chandler, according to Clark, has said he hoped Clark would qualify as a juror. Chandler was held responsible for the conversation, so far as the court was concerned.

In the course of his examination Clark gave the defence a clue to a new witness, who, it is said, would be summoned. Shortly after, he said, had told him the expression unpleasantly was one of gas, having smelled the gas a block away.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN HAS A MYSTERY

ABINGTON, Oct. 25.—John L. Sullivan positively cannot keep out of the limelight—try as hard as he may or may not. Sometimes he may not.

For the benefit of the Little Bohn boys of the present generation it may be mentioned that Mr. Sullivan achieved a measure of fame in the squared circle. Squaring the circle or rather attempts to do so have been among the lighter diversions of eminent metaphysicians for several centuries. Not having the right sort of make-up these E. M.'s never have succeeded in the squaring process.

Having split the squared circle Mr. Sullivan joined in the movement to uplift the stage. Some time ago he harkened to the "back to the soil" cry and he now numbered among the toiling agriculturists—the backbone of our lusty commonwealth, etc.—of West Abington.

The last previous incursion of Mr. Sullivan into the limelight of nation-wide publicity was caused by his announced desire to run for Congress. Mrs. Sullivan intervened and vast political plans and universals were thus prevented and thought-lift movement for Congress outlined a severe set back.

Thus foiled Mr. Sullivan has turned his attention to the aesthetic side of life. He has devoted serious thought and time to selecting an appropriate title for his landlord here and to his selection has with a keen sense of the values of the limelight selected a name, the mystery of whose choice and its significance is self evident to all the curiosity of the world.

"Dandy Rose Farm" is the name proudly displayed on a big sign on the roofing roof of the barn on the Sullivan estate. Maybe he got the name or what it stands for, John L. auditorily declines to explain. He isn't even moved by the accusation that he picked out that name because it "listened good" as he would say.

MAILS BARRED TO MR. SANTA CLAUS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The Postoffice Department announced that letters addressed "To Santa Claus" and forwarded to the dead letter office will no longer be distributed to charitable organizations, benevolent persons, poor children or others. Four years ago postmasters were authorized to turn over such letters to charitable persons, but because of many abuses the order has been rescinded. Under the laws and regulations letters to Santa Claus are classed as "dead matter" and returned to the writers or destroyed.

HEARST CALLS ON PARTY TO OVERTHROW BOSSES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The Washington Post prints the following interview with William Randolph Hearst:

What is the political situation in New York?

What will be the probable outcome of the election?

What will be your attitude in view of your recent Democratic declaration?

In answer to the above questions Mr. Hearst gave the Washington Post the following interview:

The political situation in New York is mainly one of Democratic demoralization and general dissatisfaction with the leadership of the Democratic party in that State.

The outcome will certainly be the defeat of the Democratic party as a whole, or in part. A feature of the Democratic defeat which will interest the country will be the loss of the Democratic Assembly, the only branch of the Legislature which is voted upon essentially Democratic—can be found, the situation will be solved.

I am not making a personal fight in New York, but a Democratic fight, a fight for Democratic principles and for genuine Democratic policy which will serve the people and satisfy the people and keep the Democratic party in power.

The present leadership of the Democratic party in New York is not in sympathy with the Democracy of the nation, nor in harmony with the Democratic masses of its own constituency. The Democratic party of New York will be defeated at the election, and can only be saved from continual defeat and disgrace by finally and forever deposing as leaders the unworthy incompetent and un-Democratic ward bosses of Tammany Hall.

DEMOCRATS AT CAPITAL WATCH FOSS CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The campaign of Governor Foss for re-election in Massachusetts is being closely watched by Democratic members of Congress who are dropping into Washington. They figure that if he wins by a fine majority in an off year it will be a good beginning for the big battle next year.

"I am watching the campaign in Massachusetts with great interest," Representative Carlin, of Virginia, said. "I certainly am hoping for a clear cut victory for Governor Foss, because I think that by so making an excellent campaign and is standing on a record that ought to make many votes for him.

"The election of Foss for a second term would have a moral effect on the Democrats throughout the country. They would show them what they can do by hard work. Foss's re-election would be fatal indictment of the unbending Democracy during the past two years."

SAVED $1, BUT LOST $300 A YEAR SALARY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The Postmaster at Essex Berlin, Ct., reports that his receipts for last year were $600. If he had spent a dollar for stamps, his receipts would have been $1,000, making him allowable if his office was to continue in the third class. The dollar he was not spent for stamps, and so the Postmaster-General, under the law, must put East Berlin back into the fourth class.

WALSH OFTEN VISITED BOSTON

Martin J. Walsh frequently came to Boston to visit his wife, during the months that efforts were being made to arrest him to answer to indictments growing out of the looting of the National City Bank of Cambridge, a friend of the late king who died in New York decided today.

"Walsh was a man of splendid daring," continued the friend, "but he could not stand the strain of being hunted. He had always been accustomed to the intimacy of a large number of friends, and he missed them so much that he became morose, and was on the point of surrendering himself to the authorities several times during fits of despondency.

"Only a very few friends know that he was never more than a hundred miles from New York since he fled from Boston. Still fewer friends ever saw him, and these were all surprised at the change that seemed to come over Walsh when he began to feel that he was being hunted.

"Although many people have no use for a man who lived as Walsh did, Walsh had his code of honor and lived up to it as sincerely as many a deacon of the church lives up to his code. He never took money from the poor. Rather he gave money to them.

"Owing to the fact that the Kelliher case was pending in the courts, he was persuaded by friends not to surrender until after the final judgment had been pronounced on his appeal for a new trial. Counsel in New York called on Walsh repeatedly in New York, where he was living openly for the last six months.

"After his indictment in June, 1910, a capias was issued for Walsh's arrest. Service on this order of the court was made when United States Deputy Marshal Tighe, who knew Walsh as a neighbor, viewed the lobby at Eastman's Undertaking Rooms on Tremont street. Following ancient custom, the order of the court directed the seizure of the defendant's body, dead or alive, and required the officer who served it to positively identify the body and record the identification under oath.

"Mrs. Walsh, it is reported, has notified the insurance company in which her husband held a policy for $5,000. This sum is said to be the only thing Walsh had left of the fortune which he had won at the gaming table.

SECRET OF CHARMING YOUTHFUL COMPLEXIONS

Most sensible advice comes from the pen of Mae Martyn in the San Francisco Call as follows:

"The greatest mistake which thousands of women make daily is the practice of smearing their faces with powder in a vain attempt to improve their looks. Powder only covers up complexion ills temporarily, clogs the skin pores and eventually causes blotchy wrinkled faces.

"Those who wish to whiten and beautify their complexions and make their faces more charming and youthful looking should try an inexpensive lotion made by dissolving 4 ounces of spurmax in either 1-pint hot water or 4-pint witch hazel, adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Where witch hazel is used, the skin dries more quickly.

"This lotion prevents blackheads, enlarged pores, skin roughness and makes the skin soft, smooth and velvety. It takes off that shiny, sallow look and adds beauty that no other known beautifier will."

Pimples on the Face

Women and girls are particularly liable to these troubles. Cadum, the new remedy, causes pimples to dry up and disappear. Cadum contains an extract from the well-known tree Juniperus Oxycedrus, which has a wonderfully soothing and healing effect when the skin is inflamed, irritated or diseased. From the first application distinct improvement is noticed. Cadum should be tried for any skin trouble. It quickly acts upon acne, blackheads, blotches, sores, eruptions, roughness, chafings, etc. 10c and 25c at all druggists.

CROWDED TRAIN IS SHAKEN UP

Passengers on the Boston-bound train that left the Harvard street station of the Midland branch of the New Haven road at 7:25 o'clock to-day were shaken up when the train came to an abrupt halt at the Mount Bowdoin station. Several of them were thrown forward in their seats, but no one was injured.

A coupling of one of the cars broke, resulting in the car next jamming the forward car. The train was crowded. It became necessary to take out a car on the train and run it toward Boston and switch it.

In the meantime the passengers waited as patiently as possible on the main track until their engine returned and hauled the train into the South station.

ALL STOMACH TROUBLE VANISHES AFTER TAKING A LITTLE DIAPEPSIN

If you had some Diapepsin handy and would take a little now, your stomach distress or Indigestion would vanish in five minutes and you would feel fine.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, out-of-order stomach before you realize it.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness of Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no undigested food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is at any druggists waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disturbance.

FOR SICK, SOUR BILIOUS STOMACH, INDIGESTION AND GAS TAKE CASCARETS.

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, blosting after eating, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means indigestion; a disordered stomach which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they cure indigestion, because they immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. Then your stomach is right and stays right for months. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep your entire family feeling good for months. BACK BAY SAFE ROBBER FREED

George H. Randall, son of a wealthy automobile man in New York, has returned to that city immediately following the closing of his case on file in the superior court of Suffolk County, where he had pleaded guilty to the larceny of $1700 and of receiving stolen goods valued at $1,000. The money and goods were the property of Nathan Jacobs, a tailor who lives at No. 329 Newbury street. Randall had pleaded not guilty in the Municipal Court but when arraigned in the higher tribunal, retracted his plea and acknowledged his guilt.

In the Superior Court proceedings, no mention was made of Miss Vivian Jacobs, the handsome daughter of Jacobs in connection with the case although when he was arrested, Randall maintained that it was Miss Jacobs who had opened the safe and handed him the money, jewelry, and silverware.

Romance in Case.

The peculiar feature of the case is that while Randall was charged and convicted by his own confession of receiving $1000 in stolen property, no one has been charged with stealing it.

Randall said in the municipal court that he came to Boston about the first of August and took apartments at the New Winthrop Hotel in Winthrop, where he met Miss Jacobs. They were out two days there, he said, when Miss Jacobs invited him to accompany her to her home. She pointed out her father's safe to him, he said, and told him that it contained $225, as well as money belonging to her mother and considerable ware and jewelry.

Miss Jacobs, declared Randall, opened the safe, and one afternoon when they were in the house together, she took $25 from it, afterward paying the bills for a theatre party and supper. This was repeated, according to the New York youth, and on August 19 and August 21 the couple again visited the house and tried for two hours to open the safe but without success.

Aided By Safe Expert.

The couple visited the safe store on Salisbury street where the strongbox had been purchased and got a safe worker, who went to the Jacobs house and opened the safe.

The safe was robbed by Miss Jacobs, according to Randall, and by Randall according to Miss Jacobs.

Miss Jacobs's story differed much from that of Randall. She declared that she had nothing at all to do with it; that Randall, Hardy and the latter's band expressed admiration for her mother's jewels, afterwards stealing a key to the Jacobs house and robbing the same himself. Besides telling him the combination of the safe, which she said he gained from her one day in laughing conversation, Miss Vivian Jacobs denied having assisted Randall in the robbery.

ITALIAN INVADERS AFRAID OF CHOLERA

TRIPOLI, Oct. 25.—For fear of carrying cholera into Southern Italy, where military prisons are located, the Italian forces in Tripoli have decided to keep their prisoners on African soil. Thousands of natives were disarmed to-day, and native soldiers in the Turkish army who were captured, instead of being transported, were put into confinement here. Arab tribesmen will be disarmed to prevent their effectiveness in the Turkish ranks. Although the military authorities are attempting to keep news of the pestilence as secret as possible, it is learned that numerous deaths have occurred in the past forty-eight hours.

Girl in Mystery of Safe Robbery

Miss Vivian Jacobs was accused by George H. Randall of helping him to loot the safe in her own father's home.

DIVORCE ASKED FOR G DISCORD

That her husband, who was a violinist, played discordantly on the G string until 2 o'clock nearly every morning for the purpose of annoying her and keeping her awake was the unusual testimony given in the Suffolk divorce court to-day by Mrs. Lulu H. Truscott, who sought freedom from her husband, Frederico.

She charged her husband with cruel and abusive treatment. She cited his rasping violin playing as the chief instance. Whether it is cruelty for a good musician to play in discord will be the fine question which Judge Hardy is called upon to solve.

"My husband is a music teacher," said Mrs. Truscott. "He teaches violin playing, and also playing on other instruments. He is an expert violinist and can play the most exquisite music. I have heard him play Handel's 'Largo' and Mendelssohn's 'Songs Without Words' and other masterpieces of music by the great composers with marvellous technique. He has often carried me to the seventh heaven of delight with his playing.

"We had been married but a short time when he began to abuse me by playing till 2 o'clock in the morning upon the G string of the violin. He tuned down the violin so as not to annoy the other tenants for fear they would make a complaint, but I could hear the playing distinctly. The discords which he caused out of the G string were terrible. They used to grate upon my nerves so that at times I was almost on the verge of prostration from the rasping sounds. I begged of him to be merciful to me and to stop, but he only laughed fiendishly at me and continued to play. The sounds emitted from the violin were worse than those of a dog howling to the moon. I have never heard noises which compared with them. Finally, because of the terrible strain upon my nerves I left him."

Judge Hardy, after listening to this pathetic and unusual story, felt that in its nature over told in the Suffolk Divorce Court, took the case under advisement. These litigants were married in Boston September 12, 1909.

SEAVER PAPERS ARE RULED OUT

The State ballot law commission this afternoon ruled out the nomination papers of Augustus Seaver, labor candidate for Governor, by an unanimous vote. The charge made at the hearing was that the majority of the signatures to the papers were fraudulent. There is no appeal except to the courts and this will not be made as Seaver's counsel announced his willingness to withdraw.

Attorney Daniel T. McEnaar, counsel for Chairman McDonald of the Democratic State Committee, startled witnesses and spectators at the hearing to-day before the Commission by his statement that District Attorney Pelletier has taken up the charges of forgery and fraud in connection with the signatures on the nomination papers of Seaver. It is certain that prosecutions will follow.

"Seaver Was Trimmed."

This statement followed one by Attorney Peter J. Donoghue, counsel for Seaver, in which he said that his client realized he had been "trimmed" by the men he had asked to get the signatures and that he was willing to withdraw his name from the ballot and have the case dropped.

"With the understanding of counsel," added Donoghue, "that the opposition does not go any further in this case."

After a conference with Chairman McDonald, McEnaar accepted and asked the commission to hear all the evidence. He declared that Seaver knew the genuineness of the signatures were fraudulent. Attorney Donoghue retorted that neither he nor Seaver had expressed his willingness to withdraw his name and the matter left the jurisdiction of the Commission.

Want Case Investigated.

"We intend to take this matter to the District Attorney," he said. "Mr. Seaver has been 'trimmed.' We want the case fully investigated."

Mr. McEnaar then announced that the District Attorney already has the matter under investigation.

Professor William E. Hingston testified that seventy-five per cent. of the signatures appeared to have been written by the same hand.

For Seaver, George Kenny testified that his name, which appeared on the papers, had been written for him.

SEE SUCCESS IN HEARST RETURN

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 25.—The Los Angeles Herald this morning publishes the following editorial:

"William Randolph Hearst has returned to the Democratic party. The Herald rejoins on this page editorial comments on this fact from various Eastern papers, news of interest to Herald readers.

"The Herald disagreed with Mr. Hearst when he left the party. Now we welcome him back to the ranks of progressive Democracy. Mr. Hearst's return to the party is most opportune. It comes at a time when the control of the party is sought by both reactionaries and progressives; and as the control of the Republican party is a matter of dispute between Regulars and LaFollettepers.

No Doubt as to His Position.

"There is no doubt where Mr. Hearst stands, or that his attitude is for the great good and permanent salvation of the party.

"Plunging into the thick of the fight against scandalous boodism of Tammany in New York, Mr. Hearst's participation in the primaries will mightily stimulate the masses of voters to free themselves from the domination of boss rule. If Mr. Hearst can purge the Democratic party of corruption he will be entitled to the warm gratitude of all true progressives, and to clear the decks for action that the New York State may be carried by the Democrats in 1912.

"Mr. Hearst left the Democratic party because he held that the party had drifted from its ancient faiths and progressive principles. He has returned to it, it is believed, because the party has moved on to adopt his viewpoint, not that his viewpoint has changed.

A Pioneer Progressive.

"Mr. Hearst was the pioneer 'progressive' when that word and no application to the political discussion. In the files of his newspaper can be found arguments for the initiative referendum recall, direct primaries, election of United States Senators by the people, corporate publicity and public ownership of public utilities. For years these principles were scoffed at by the people's enemies and by the fakirs.

"All of these reforms have triumphed somewhere where his editorial influence has been felt. These principles are the world's principles and the principles of the majority of the voters of this State has been proved by our recent elections.

GOV. FOSS ATTACKS G.O.P. MACHINE

Sharply Arraigns Record of Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham in Speeches.

NORTH ADAMS, Oct. 25.—Governor Foss, in a rousing rally following an all-day speaking tour of Berkshire towns, hammered away at Frothingham, Lodge's machine candidate for Governor, not only on party questions but on State issues as well. The Governor declared that Frothingham was but the creature of Lodge, Crane, Draper, and the high tariff Home Market Club, that the Republican State platform was as evasive on the tariff as the national Republican platform of 1908, and that Frothingham on the tariff stands just where his sponsors—Lodge, Crane and their high tariff colleagues of their kind—stand entirely apart from what the people ask and in support of the trusts and protected interests.

Ex-Senator Thomas F. Cassidy, a running mate with Governor Foss on the Democratic ticket last year, delivered a red-hot Foss speech, declaring that under Governor Foss more constructive popular legislation has been enacted than in the preceding twenty years. "And under the Governor's suggestion more is yet to come," declared the ex-Senator.

Republican orators and the anti-Foss press have been declaring that ex-Senator Cassidy was at odds with Governor Foss. But the Governor and Mr. Cassidy disclosed how false this Republican campaign lie is. Cassidy predicted the re-election of Governor Foss—the deserved election as he put it—and Governor Foss in adding declared that his majority would be twice that of last year.

Governor Foss said:

"Tissue of Falsehoods."

"My opponent seems possessed by the delusion that he is running for a national office and apparently a very high one. He has taken upon himself the burden of the whole country and presumes to save the national government and the whole American people from the results of their own folly.

"The Republican candidate is an amiable man but his own State record he forgotten as he is to avoid mine. I am running for re-election as Governor of Massachusetts and for nothing else. I base my claim for re-election solely upon my record as Governor.

"What the Republican party appears to fear most is the intrumenting of the people, the right of the people of Massachusetts to govern their own affairs through the people's own good reasons.

"His speeches are made out of whole cloth, woven apparently by a mind not covered with the slightest regard for truth, a tissue of errors, misrepresentations, and falsehoods.

"A comparison between my opponent's principal assertions and the known truth shows a confirmed aversion to facts.

"Every bold lie he has told has brought in its train its basis for bad logic and false conclusions.

"The Republican candidate says that I, being an advocate of downward revision, am opposed to the best and highest tariff. Yet he knows that it was the Payne-Aldrich law that reduced the tariff on boots and shoes.

Refutes Frothingham Claims.

"He says that the reduction of the tariff on boots and shoes permitted the sale of small lots of English shoes in the United States, and he certainly, first that the reduction was made by Republicans, and that it was followed by only a decrease in annual exports of boots and shoes of $3,000,000.

"He says that the wages of textile workers are not less in England than they in the United States, yet the reports of this State, of Rhode Island, of the State Department at Washington, and the recent investigations of Professor Sewell Nearing of the protectionist Wharton School of Finance, of the University of Pennsylvania, all show that the nominal wages in both countries are about the same, and that the real wages are much higher in England than in the United States. These authorities are, without exception, Republican.

"He says that I am opposed to protection for Massachusetts industries and Massachusetts workmen, yet he knows that what I am opposed to is the high cost of living caused by the superfluous protection in the Payne-Aldrich tariff which reduces both the real wages of workmen and the real protection for Massachusetts industries generally.

"He says that my election will endanger the wages of textile workmen, yet the State reports show that in 1908, a year of Republican triumph, and of remarkable textile dividends, Massachusetts mill owners reduced the wages of 95,043 employees an aggregate of $2,000,000 a week, or $5,028,860 in the year.

"He says that I made a false promise to the voters in my last campaign, that the cost of living would be advanced by my election as Governor, and that the cost of living would go down. He knows that the cost of living has not advanced, and that when its success was expected prices of foodstuffs did go down, and that when its defeat in Canada was announced, prices went up again. He knows that after my election Democrats and Republicans united in Congress to revise the tariff downward, and were obstructed by the refusal of stand-patters and the President to cooperate in their efforts to eliminate superfluous protection from the least desirable schedules.

"My opponent says that I am an enemy of Massachusetts manufacturers, and particularly of textile manufacturers. But the Republican candidate is neither a tariff expert nor a manufacturer. One of the most widely recognized experts in the United States is Walter Hines Langshaw who is a successful textile manufacturer and a president of Bates College, Lewiston, Me. New Bedford, one of the largest and most profitable plants in the country, which Mr. Langshaw rose from the ranks and worked his way up from sheer ability. He is a man whose opinion is worth something to the voter.

"Makes Mis-Statements."

"Mr. Langshaw agrees with me that the trouble with the textile industry is that it depends on an insecure foundation, superfluous protection which allows the producer to charge high prices in the United States but keeps him out of foreign markets, and reduces the purchasing power of the people at home. Mr. Langshaw has endorsed my position that what American manufacturers need is equal access to their markets.

"Mr. Laughlin's endorsement of me ought to be a complete answer to those who say my position on this question is for political advantage. This successful manufacturer says that the Republican party is dominated by a corrupt trading combine, and that to lift it is the vital thing for American manufacturers. Whether sincerity lies in my position or in that of my opponents, it ought to be easy to decide.

"I charge the Republican candidate with a consistent lack of sincerity on the tariff issue. He says that he is not fighting against tariff revision. The following evidence shows:

"First—His platform is non-committal as to downward revision.

"Second—His managers, Lodge, Crane, Draper, The Home Market Club, and others, are the leaders of the stand-pat party. The Massachusetts Senators have even crowned the old barber of the United States Senate, a man over seventy years of age, and a resident of Washington, to come to Boston to be registered to vote in this election.

The New York Journal of Commerce, the inspired organ of Wall Street interests, says that the tariff is not to be revised.

The American Protective Tariff League, clutch, the various organizations of textile manufacturers, and all the forces that are supporting the Republican candidates have enlisted to prevent any revision of the Payne-Aldrich rates.

"Third—Frothingham refuses to be drawn from the Republican candidate's speeches to that to be published in the same cause, and everything that he says proves it.

"After a careful scrutiny of all the speeches of the Republican candidate I say that he has not during this whole campaign uttered a single pertinent truth with respect to the public affairs of this State, or given the slightest evidence of sincerity, but has gone on from day to day and week to week in a labyrinth of misstatements, and misrepresentation."

Discusses Milk Question.

Governor Foss has made a statement explaining his milk bill veto and saying the farmers will get a fair show if he is re-elected. The statement says:

"In a letter published Mrs. Putnam and Mrs. Bradley and Cabot Ammerton, well knowing it, my veto of the Ellis milk bill was based on a letter of mine to them.

"We are simply asking that the State Board of Health be given local authority so that it can raise the standard of cleanliness from 50 per cent. of the milk consumed in Massachusetts and of the out-of-State milk to the same standard which is now maintained by the 65 per cent. of the producers mainly from the nearby towns and dairies have already been approved by the State Board of Health.

"Between the Ellis milk bill because it took from the local boards of health all power to regulate milk and vested it in a milk commission board to be appointed by the Governor.

"Under this bill, the Board of Health would simply report the condition where it would simply carry out the law as it now stands with regulation board.

"So far as anything is known the present milk bill is entirely satisfactory with Mrs. Putnam and Mrs. Bradley and Cabot Ammerton. That is, legislation should be given to the State Board of Health to maintain the present high standard of most Massachusetts dairies and to bring defective dairies up to standard.

"There was another vicious feature of the Ellis bill. The inspection is provided was to be added on over existing methods. The milk producer was to be subject to the inspection of his local health officer and the State Cattle Bureau and Dairy Bureau, and also the new commission.

"Efficiency cannot be secured by having four or five different schemes of regulation enforced at the same time. A report on these very features while the Ellis bill was pending, and I pointed them out again in my veto.

"Moreover, the existing methods of regulation and the transportation rates for milk into Massachusetts are such that milk contractors have preferred to go out of the State to get their supply. As a result the majority of our citizens are often dependent upon milk which is from twenty-four to sixty hours old.

"This for the Massachusetts farmer has never had a fair show. If I am re-elected for another year, I expect to propose to see that he has a fair show, not only as to regulation and inspection but as to transportation rates.

"It is very well for Mr. Ellis to draw up schemes of regulation. Mr. Ellis produces milk on so large a scale that he can and does distribute his own product. He is independent of the middleman and of transportation rates, and has thus been able to develop a grade of milk for which he gets twelve cents a quart, whereas the ordinary producer gets from seven cents these and one-half to four cents. The milk industry of Massachusetts has been in a large degree legislated out of the State. Except in the case of dangerous and well established problems like Mr. Ellis's, I believe in a reasonable method of centralized milk regulation established and with this system I intend to see that the farmers of Massachusetts have at least a fair show.

"Federal authorities have already declared that Massachusetts milk is the purest of any in the country.

"Under the legislation which I propose to secure Massachusetts milk will also be produced, distributed and sold under conditions fair to all."

David I. Walsh's Speech.

Mr. Walsh said:

"The Governor Foss made good! This is the issue in this campaign. Every voter who enters the voting booth on November 7 must ask himself this question to himself when he finds upon his ballot the names of the candidates for Governor. Who will best serve the Commonwealth of Massachusetts? Eugene N. Foss of Fall River, or Louis A. Frothingham, Every other issue is secondary to this judgment.

"If both candidates are fine orators into public life national and State issues might be a controlling factor in determining the voter's decision. But this is a campaign where the record of public service of both candidates is before the voters, more clearly than ever before.

"Governor Foss's record in advancing progressive legislation, in appointing an unusual number of humane laws and his service to the Commonwealth in opposing parties, men of special fitness and high character, cannot and will not be ignored by the voters.

"On the other hand, it is becoming more deeply impressed every day upon the citizens of the Commonwealth that Mr. Frothingham has persistently represented the very politics and principles in State government which Governor Foss has advocated and which in many instances are now written into the statutes of the Commonwealth.

"So you, Mr. Voter, approve of the fifty-four hour bill for women and children? Do you believe in the workingmen's compensation act? Your answer to these and the other wonderful laws enacted in the past two years can be given on one way. The form of government under which we live permits you to express your approval or disapproval of any and every public act. On election day on your verdict of November 7 will determine and to be the nature of a command to the public officials whom you choose to serve you in the future along the lines of the records of either of the leading candidates of the Democratic and Republican parties.

People for Foss.

"In my judgement there can be no question that the sentiment of this Commonwealth is overwhelmingly in favor of conducting the business affairs of the Commonwealth in the progressive, liberal and humane spirit in which Governor Foss has done.

"In complaining through the Berkshires the most astounding thing that I have experienced has been the tremendous and widespread opposition among all classes of voters to the party enrollment clause in the direct primary law. Every audience is large and in the small communities vie with each other in enthusiastic demonstrations of disapproval. It is the issue upon which the contest for the Democratic governorship is being waged. Republicans and Democrats everywhere are pressed at the opportunity given to them by their vote in selecting their Lieutenant-Governor, to protest against the violation of the right of secrecy to one's political opinions and beliefs that the direct primary law has denied them.

"Mr. Lane, the Republican candidate, is the first man in this State to advocate party enrollment. He is the father of the caucus and the primary law which compels a man to be publicly branded as some political organization before he can register his vote for the candidates for political nominations.

"The result of that nefarious law has disfranchised over 400,000 voters from having any voice in the nomination of any man to public office. It also deprives a man of the right to change his honest convictions unless he does so publicly thirty days before the primary election. I am unalterably opposed to this or any other law, which violates the secrecy of the ballot.

MACKEREL KING SUES GEORGE V.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Two kings, "Sol" Jacobs of Gloucester, Mass., the "Mackerel King," and George V. of England are at odds and the State Department is all at sea over it. Unless King George, or the British government, the House of Lords, the Admiralty, the Lord Mayor or somebody doesn't hand over $250,000 in pounds sterling to "King" Solomon of Gloucester there's going to be a disturbance that will make the Chinese revolution and the Italian-Turco wars look like branch sessions of a Sunday school picnic. Gloucester is backing "King" Solomon to a man.

Held on False Charge.

Jacobs wants that $250,00 for the illegal detention of his crack fishing vessel, the Ethel B. Jacobs, by officials of the British government off Castletown Bearhaven, Ireland, in August, 1909.

In his complaint, filed before the State Department, "King" Solomon relates that during his absence from the Ethel B. Jacobs she was seized by British officials on the charge of fishing within the three mile limit. She was detained for fourteen days, during which time her commander and crew had their freedom hurt and lacerated by seeing the Irish and English fishermen pulling in record catches. It being one of the very best fishing times in that vicinity for years. By the time the vessel was released, after the court had dismissed the case, the fish were practically all gone. The Ethel B.'s hard luck continued, however, and she lost in a storm on October 25 of that year.

Figuring on Fish.

The basis of Jacob's claim is that had the vessel not been detained for fourteen days 500 barrels of fish a day could have been handled. This would have been 7,000 barrels which at $19.50 a barrel would have yielded him $136,000. He asks $100,000 damages for false arrest, bringing the total of the claim to $236,000.

Gloucester men say the Ethel B. Jacobs was one of the fastest and best schooners that ever sailed out of Gloucester. That she was extremely fast is indicated by her making the trip across the Atlantic in fourteen days, two days more than the record made by the yacht Atlantic in her famous race across the ocean.

King Solomon and George may not come to blows over those hypothetical $250,000 for the case is likely to go before the Mixed Commission on Claims, which, however, hasn't been appointed yet.

Harvard Regards Brown Game as Stumbling Block

By TED PARKE.

A little dull in the strenuous work, with only a short scrimmage today and then a bad time of it tomorrow, is the schedule for the Harvard football team while it is ardously preparing those days behind closed doors in the Stadium for the game with Brown Saturday. The way Harvard followers view the situation is this:

If Harvard can succeed in beating Brown, which has primed itself for the Harvard game this year in particular, the crimson will then be able to go ahead and down each of the other teams as that came along. In other words, the Brown game is the dangerous stock proposition of the season. With title successfully cleared away all will be plain sailing.

After the great showing which the Harvard varsity and the subs made against the second team in the secret practice yesterday, as though Brown was going to come to Cambridge for its annual beating. For the first time this year, Harvard showed itself yesterday not nothing seemed able to withstand the terrific attack of the line, which incidentally played without the services of Captain Fisher.

At no other time this year has the line showed such team work. Every man was with his mate on the offense. There was none of the single man charging. The whole line moved forward like a wall and everything gave way before it. With Captain Fisher in the line, it would have been great strength, but even with Mc-Grath, the sub in the right guard berth, the line showed great power and cohesiveness and its playing showed the coaches that they have a big asset for the game with the Brunonians.

In the thirty minute scrimmage between the varsity and the second team, the varsity scored six touchdowns, and four goals after touchdowns. Potter in the meantime missing six tries for point from drop kicks. In this one department of the game the varsity quarter has deteriorated. His efforts yesterday being rather poor and ill-judged, not in every other way his work was excellent.

Subs Beat Second Team.

In addition to the scoring of the varsity the subs in the two twenty-minute periods took a bite out of the second team and in each period, the subs scored once. The feature of the varsity scrimmage was, in a few words, the general all-around excellent work of the whole team. That is a rather broad statement and general too, but every one put up such a good game that the credit must be general.

The stars at carrying the ball were Wendell and Reynolds. Wendell could be counted on for his fine plunges, and Reynolds, making a brilliant return after a revelation, his work in this line being undoubtedly stellar yesterday. Some time Wendell was sent through centre on a fake kick formation and his part was performed to a nicety. That is a rather broad statement and general too, but every one put up such a good game that the credit must be general.

MEYERS SAYS GIANTS WILL WIN NEXT THREE GAMES

MARQUARD, M'GRAW'S LAST HOPE, TO PITCH AGAINST MACKS TO-DAY

Meyers Predicts Giants Will Win Next Three Games

By CHIEF MEYERS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Don't anybody say think they never come back like Mackmen—and that's a wonderful ball club to get so far, making the series for the world championship at all. Let it go at that. They have now three straight behind us but I say this "if one club can win three straight, there's no reason why another one can't."

They have done it, and now it is up to us to do it. I think we will. Perhaps we will, perhaps not. But, take it from me, we've got our backs up against the wall and we'll break necks trying, anyhow. I prefer anything to even a gigantic impossible" our last Western swing, when we were nine behind and came back with a National pennant stowed away in our grip. We have been need not lose.

Today I predict positively to me will win. Rube Marquard will pitch us straight to an All.

Yesterday afternoon I was trying to be neutral, fair to the newspaper articles I have contributed. Will admit All team mates admitted it at the end of pitching, fielding and hitting. Comiskey a team had it on us, except in one thing. And once again I'd like to say my readers, my last word and so is Matty Mathewson's and John McGraw's the rest of the series is to John Franklin that fellow does not break up ball I don't wish him any hard luck. I hope—well, the old relative his down there I Marquard pitches he likes keeps Mack's option this Pennsylvania and he knows Mr. Harry Davis, all of Philadelphia and the world's series. Mr. Shibe would be some fun for

here's the situation:

Athletics retain outfielders and so the fair answer.

Matty Looked Good

Matty looked fine, to start. He fanned easy and put Dooin on a st Collins got a single off him but he Mr. Home Run Baker on his head walked out to the box and looked at Baker and the crowd to see what it was. He figured wants to re-pass this fellow by sliding up on him. Don't give him two inches. He did fool somebody, sure enough, the result was that Baker almost broke back and singled for the third time he clubbed ball. I thought that we had

Athletics Score Run

Athletics scored in the first inning before I say anything about that I before I say anything about that I Baker got to first on a scratch hit and started for third on a short single by Eddie Collins. Davis hit to Klem the lone umpire, called me out, was my honesty that I got me fool Baker was declared safe. Davis hit Baker got to third and couldn't score. But his decision off of reading.

Matty walked right after that and I don't know to this day why he passed me but got the best of the break at that time. Dooin struck out and Barry in the first inning Jack Bentley reached a safe drive through the box. Bentley made a run to first to get Barry the ball after his grounder to Bentley. Barry was safe, the first New York outfielder really to get to first base. Bentley made a throw to first two strikes and a ball on Bentley at the Larry Doyle smashed the first ball pitched to him to center field. Hartley slipped in the mushy grass and the ball bounded past him. Doyle reached third, which caused the crowd to rise and cheer. It sounded like a home run. Doyle had got the best of the break at last. Doyle scored from third on Art Fletcher's out.

McGraw Changes Attack.

Manager Mack manifestly changed his line of attack, also was sending his men in to bunt away at the fifth pitched ball. The visitors are playing strong at the waiting game, but the Gotham leader had directed that repeatedly that his men were letting the ball go by, this method, and he did not want it. They started well in the Athletics seemed to be putting the ball over the plate at the time, but without any success. They ran out the fourth. They got a single, the sailing effigies of Mr. Mack and the first batsman who Mack skipped a double in left center field, which put the leagues of people daily on another business with waste paper with which they have lots of extra to-day.

Klem was one of the two things that I found around with me. Rube Marquard and Fletcher threw out Bender on a deep bouncer, but the damage was done and the game was over.

The Athletics got another run, but it was unnecessary. They had enough. Ben Dooin struck up on Matty's pass. Eddie Collins got a topping grounder to Herzog and Davis moved in third while the Giant third baseman was shooting the ball across to first. Then Jim Thorpe pounded a long hit to Murray in right field. The slow moving Davis set himself for the count and was on his way for the plate. The instant the ball landed in the outfielder's glove.

Murray Throws Wild.

Murray lashed out with a throw to the plate a throw as it makes with amazing precision eight times out of ten. This throw was one of the times when the ball bouncing past Meyers to the stand.

PART ONE—(Continued)

MARTINDALE, had she but known it, was very near her. At another time her sensitive sense of smell would have distinguished the scent of the tobacco he smoked, rising delicately above the curiously blended odors of the godown and the strong, pungent smell of the rain-smitten earth.

As a matter of fact, Martindale had been in the godown ever since he had left the bungalow after his midday sleep, going through the stores and consulting with the overseer of the native laborers on the estate, the half-caste Gomez.

Gomez Not a Coward

Both men had been too occupied at the moment of Kitty's entrance into the great barn-like place to notice her. To Gomez, born and bred in West Africa, a tropical storm had no terrors; physically he was not a coward; Africa has a way of gradually short shrift to her cowards. He had, as almost every man has, one familiar fear, of which no mention need be made at present; but as the storm that shook the godown shiveringly made conversation a matter of fatiguing impracticability, he crept on quietly marking off stores in the huge, ledger-like book on the sloping desk before which he stood.

Martindale was far from being so calm; he had not Kitty's temperamental dread of a storm; but it would have been hard to find any man unaccustomed to a tropical deluge to stand unmoved in the face of the fact that tore up the earth like shrapnel, and his tangible darkness rent from time to time by living flame.

He looked at the unmoved face of the Portuguese with a sort of wonder, as Gomez bent over the ledger in the dim light of a small kerosene lamp that danced and shivered in the reverberation of the thunder.

The Evil Smile of Gomez

Gomez, looking up and catching his eyes fixed on him, smiled; when he smiled his lips curled away from his teeth, like the lips of a native; the teeth themselves were very white and pointed. He looked up at the dim roof and said something that Martindale could not hear above the roar of the rain. Bending near to him, he imagined he caught words to the effect that when the storm ceased they would continue their conversation.

There was something in the smile that John Martindale disliked and feared more than the angry face of the storm. He turned away, his teeth set hard on the stem of his pipe.

The half-caste, watching him with lowered, furtive eyes, saw him draw himself up and square his shoulders like a man who addresses himself to some task. He shut his ledger with an ineffectual bang and, going to the window over against the desk, moved aside the grass blind and looked out.

The darkness had lifted a little and the rain was lessening; the air was thick with the white steam that rose from the deluged earth; it was evident that the force of the storm was spent. Having satisfied himself of this, he turned back to Martindale and spoke; this time his voice sounded clearly, but distinctly, above the steady shotgun on the roof.

"Well, what do you propose to do?" he asked.

Evil Look in Eyes

He did not smile as he put the question, but there was an evil look in his eyes that caused John Martindale's fingers to itch with a desire to give a blow that would wipe it out forever. It was with an effort that did not escape the quick observation of the half-caste that he controlled himself, making an elaborate gesture of knocking the ashes from his pipe.

"It's uncommonly difficult to know what to do," he said slowly, "but the man must be got off to some way. We can't have him going back to England with these stories. No one is safe in these days—liberty of individual action is perfectly dead. If this man Baring goes back and inflames the grandmotherly press at home, it will mean a British commission up here in as sure as fate. It is not necessary to tell you what it would mean for you."

The half-caste laughed and shrugged his shoulders and spat upon the ground.

"It is conceivable that it might even be awkward for you, sir," he said. His tone was grave and perfectly respectful, and yet there was a suggestion of menace in it that did not escape Martindale. "In England there might be a great outcry. Liberty is a fetish in England—the liberty of peoples, but not of the individual—and there might be a prejudice against a man who chose to make his money out of"

"The Great Silence"

"Hush!" The warning sound formed by Martindale's lips was not audible, but the gesture that accompanied it was unmistakable. He looked around hastily, as though he dreaded that even amid the isolation of the storm there might be some eavesdropper, some one who could imagine and supply the ugly word he had elected on the half-caste's lips.

"The question is," he broke out hastily, "how is the man to be silenced?"

Again Gomez shrugged his shoulders.

"No much depends upon how far you are prepared to go," he said slowly. "But in Africa it is not as a rule a difficult matter to seal a man's lips."

John Martindale did not speak. He shot a swift glance at the half-caste, a glance in which distaste and inquiry were equally blended.

"In Africa," said Gomez, "the Great Silence lies in wait for the inexperienced behind every scrub bush. Take the question of sport, for instance. In the matter of big game shooting—why, the smallest question of degree—a step to the westward for a grassing rhinoceros—and there's the breath of the Great Silence hot in the rush of the beast's onslaught."

He stopped abruptly and leaned forward till his feverish, bloodshot eyes were within a few inches of John Martindale's face.

"There is a deadly element of uncertainty in big game shooting in Africa," he said in a hissing voice.

With a sudden exclamation Martindale drew away from him. The wordless exclamation that escaped him sounded surprisingly loud in his own ears, for the riot of the storm had died down with tropical abruptness, and the air was heavy and still with the indescribable stillness of Africa when its insect life seems to have been drugged to silence by the passage of a storm.

The half-caste laid a hand on his arm with a familiar, urgent gesture.

"What is this man Baring to you?" he asked. "Do you forget the watchword of Africa? I do not, Mr. Saxe. One must beat—or be beaten. I, who have African in my blood, know that that is naked truth. There is no mercy in Africa—there can be no mercy, except the mercy of death. That is the unwritten law."

The dinner table that night was a battlefield where three opposing forces met; each member of the little party was conscious of this fact, more or less strongly; yet any outsider looking into the cool dining room with its tiled walls, its round table gay with the brilliant flowers and fruit of the tropics and bright with glass and silver, would have seen, perhaps rather curiously—for this remote corner of Africa does not, as a rule, make for mirth and laughter—merely two men and a woman entirely at their ease, eminently well pleased and pleasing.

Baring, looking at his hostess across the bank of flaming flowers that almost before his meal was over would be faded and dead, thought that he had never before realized how beautiful she was.

Charming in force and manner, rich in those elusive attributes of talent and personality that make for charm, he had thought her that—but not beautiful. But to-night it was as though a flame had been lighted behind some rare and delicate transparency; her loveliness struck on his senses with something akin to pain. "Destructively beautiful." The phrase, read once and caught in some forgotten reverie of his memory, rose to the surface of his mind as he looked at the live pallor of her face and the shadowy crown of her precious hair.

Beauty That Destroys

"Destructively beautiful." Perhaps it was the remembrance of that warning phrase which had prompted him to speak as he had spoken, for the first time, of leaving them, of the necessity for resuming that long journey back through the forest of Gondura, moist, unsavory and unhealthy, set like a sharpshooter of Africa's army on the very coast, to pick off the stranger at the outset of their adventure against her.

His host had laughed at the idea. "My dear chap, how long have you been here—a few days? We can't let you go so easily as that. Besides, you've been uncommonly lucky since you came on here. I'll wager you're not rolled the slightest bit of your notebooks yet."

"I take most of my notes in me head, Mr. Saxe. And I don't feel lazy; I feel rather virtuous. It is the luster of your self-indulgent energy that makes others appear slack."

Martindale laughed boisterously. There was no trace in him of the gloomy man who had sat absorbed in the gloom of his own thoughts on the night of Baring's arrival at Solyore. He looked jovial, flushed; there was a more than distant resemblance between him and the bluff, ruddy John Saxe, who had turned up her face to his and kissed her roughly on lip and throat on the hotel verandah at Omdura that night which seemed so long ago, Kitty thought seriously. His hand was no longer unsteady as he poured out pegs from the spirit decanter. He was drinking more than any decent man should drink at his wife's dinner table, and he was not in the least ashamed of the fact. To-night it seemed to her as though the last trace of the John Martindale she loved—the look of her childish days, had disappeared, submerged by that other domineering personality. To-night John Saxe seemed once again to have come into his own.

She pondered if the other man, this spy, had noticed it also.

"Well, at any rate, before you go you must have some shooting," Martindale said. "You're not as much as seen an elephant yet, and your closest acquaintance with the big cats has been their purring in the brakes at night. I assure you there are worse sensations than the joy of seeing a leopard pawing at space and knowing that it has fallen to your rifle. But for sheer, downright, pulsating excitement, there is nothing in the world to beat the pursuit of the rhinoceros in his open pasture."

Baring Contemptuous.

"I don't doubt you for a moment," Baring said. "Every one who has tracked the massive herbivore says the same thing, for sheer stolidity of aspect he is hard to beat." He turned complainingly to Kitty. "I bear a distinct grudge against the Zoo and the pictorial natural history books of my youth," he said. "They implant a spirit of contempt in one's mind for these prehistoric monsters—one grows up to regard the rhinoceros as a somewhat ridiculous looking animal that the lamb would be too proud to lie down beside."

Kitty seemed to bring herself out of some realm of thought by a visible effort before she answered him.

"They do belong to the stone age, don't they?" she said.

Martindale's jeering laugh cut short her sentence.

Ginger Cream

FOR ginger cream, which is most excellent, thick cream is required. Or, if the cream be thin, gelatine must be substituted. Measure the creamy ingredient, and to each of two cups allow three ounces of preserved ginger. This latter is to be cut in fine shreds, and with it go two tablespoonfuls of ginger syrup. Whip the cream very stiff, sweeten as you like it, and then stir in the ginger and the syrup. Whip again, and set upon ice to chill some cone-shaped glasses, and just before serving fill these with the cream. Decorate each with a piece of the ginger. It must be served without delay.

SHE SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Erie, Pa. — "I suffered for five years from female troubles and at last was almost helpless. I went to three doctors and they did me no good, so my sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken only two bottles I could see a big change, so I took six bottles and I am now strong and well again. I don't know how to express my thanks for the good it has done me and I hope all suffering women will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It was worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. Endlich, R. F. D. No. 7, Erie, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory, from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

Without trying it no woman ought to say this medicine will not help her case.

Anty Drudge tells Mr. Peters Why His Daughter isn't Home.

Mr. Peters—"Well, well. Here I've come all the way from Perkinsville to visit Mandy, and she's gone. She used to be home all day on wash day."

Anty Drudge—"That was before she began using Fels-Naptha soap, Mr. Peters. She used to boil the clothes and stew and fret over the most of the day. Now Mandy gets up at 7 o'clock and does the wash in ordinary cool or lukewarm water with Fels-Naptha soap and is off for a visit at ten.

The woman whose years rest lightly on her shoulders is the woman who saves herself wherever possible—who never wastes her energies.

She doesn't stand all day Monday over a tub of steaming suds, chasing the weekly wash up and down the washboard.

There's an easier—a better method. And she knows it.

She does her wash in the Fels-Naptha way; with lukewarm or cool water and Fels-Naptha soap.

No boiling the life out of the fabric; no rubbing the clothes to shreds 'gainst a washboard.

She just soaps them well with Fels-Naptha—rolls them—let's them soak a while, and then rinses them. She's through by Monday noon.

It's the easiest way in the world—the quickest and best. Makes clothes just as clean and fresh and pure as clothes can possibly be.

And it is just as superior for household cleaning, too.

Look for directions on red and green wrapper.

URGES FIGHT ON BIG FIRE LOSS

That the installation of sprinkler systems would result in prevention of many great fires was the statement made by Joseph H. Wentworth, secretary of the National Fire Protection Association, in an address before the New England Dry Goods Association at the City club. He pointed out that he average annual loss so far in this country amounts to $250,000,000 and recalled attention to the contrast between the per capita loss by fire here, which is $3, and that of Europe, which is only thirty-three cents.

"In the past," he said, "it has always seemed easier for us to go on fire after fire of building, burning and rebuilding than to adopt the examples of Europe, that of building for permanency."

Mr. Wentworth said the general introduction of such simple devices as the fire wall and the breaking up of stairways and elevator shafts were due to the efforts of the association. He continued:

"As long as the enormous fire tax here is merged in the cost of living, as part of what we drink and what we wear, the people do not by any means realize its existence, and it becomes practically indirect taxation. It is a well-worn truism that there is no race on earth so careless with matches as the American people."

The most obvious ways of lessening the fire hazard in large cities, suggested by Mr. Wentworth were the abolition of the shingled roof and the unprotected window opening, and the installment of high-pressure water service in all high buildings. "If the downtown office buildings of our large cities," he said, "were provided with metal window frames and wired glass, they would become effectual fire stops," he added there.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; C. P. R. LEADS STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—An advance of one point in Canadian Pacific was the feature of another wide characterless opening of the stock market today. Canadian Pacific was firm both here and in London on the strength of earnings report. The market continued of a drifting character after the opening, a number of issues being unchanged from yesterday's closing. The movements in the first fifteen minutes were narrow.

Fractional gains were made in Rock Island, Missouri Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Northern Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, American Smelting and a few others. There were slight trade movements in American Can and Reet Sugar, both of which made gains. Concessions continued in the leading railroad shares, Baltimore & Ohio continued under pressure, receding to 87¾, or far under the low record reached in the movement by the issue on the present movement. United States Steel common opened to-day. Reading and Atchison were unchanged.

The curb opened dull. Americans were called in London, trading in this section being chiefly professional there.

WRIGHT MAKES A RECORD FLIGHT

KILL DEVIL HILL, N. C., Oct. 25.—Orville Wright continued his experiments in aerial stability. He made a record flight in a fifty-mile gale, going north and south and virtually stationary in his glider. He was up nine minutes, forty-five seconds and maintained an altitude of about 200 feet.

The glider was equipped with a rear rudder of twenty-four feet spread. In front, to preserve the balance, a ten-pound bag of sand was swung on the end of a rod extending eight feet in front of the aviator's seat.

Wright voiced his satisfaction with the results and declared the conditions under which the flight was made were unusually severe.

"There were more different and differing cat currents up there," he said, "than I have ever experienced before. It was a novel and exciting experience."

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

One of the influences against the stock market was a report that Attorney-General Wickersham within a few days would announce his intention to act under the criminal section of the law and under Section 6.

State street's attention is now centered on the American Tobacco plan and efforts of the lawyers to discover some way of distributing its assets without having to tax to the owners. The chief objection to the plan seems to be that the men who own the stock of the trust will get the greater part of the assets, and that is not the top-heavy authorities on corporation law are accepting the view that has always been meditated in this collection, namely, that trust busting as a pastime of the government is a huge joke.

The government's anti-busting will continue to be a joke until it has resort to the criminal section and section 6, which provides that any person having control of a corporation or by any combination, or pursuant to any understanding with the stock holder, "and being in course of transportation from one State to another or to a foreign country, shall be forfeited to the United States and may be seized and condemned by like proceedings as those provided by law for the forfeiture, seizure and condemnation of property imported into the United States contrary to law." This quotation is from the law itself, and it will be observed that the law says "shall" in making the confiscation mandatory.

In view of the decisions that the Sherman law is to be enforced literally against all illegal corporations of which there are at least a hundred, professionals are paying no attention to values, but are selling the stocks they can in all the companies they can, hoping that when the new general proceeds to do his duty as he threatens to do, and as the President in the United States has ordered him to do they may be found short of some of the utility ones.

Stocks like railroads, mining companies, gas companies and others having only one plant seem to be the only ones that it is safe to continue for investment. But even such stocks naturally would be hurt by the seizure of the goods in transit by the railroads if the law makes it mandatory for the government to do and which, of course, it will be done since the administration has announced that the law will be strictly enforced.

Attorney-General Wickersham says he knows that "about one hundred" corporations are illegal under the law. He proposes to enforce the law strictly. Therefore it would be to Attorney-General Wickersham's advantage to seize immediately all goods in transit for the benefit of all of the "hundred" corporations. The law says "shall" not "may." It would be a preposterous thing to do, but according to President Taft's latest utterances there is no other way.

Some hopeful note say the corporations will correct any abuses and thus escape the confiscation of their property in transit. Suppose are always willing to pay after they are caught, but they never get a chance unless they happen to have a conscience or they are found out. In many words that the corporations shall be treated exactly as though they were smugglers.

Information sources on Reading seem to be more hollow. From the way it is boomed a plan has been made to drive the short interest to cover. It is said that the stock dolly operators are using the stops they catch to further their game. Any story worth will be followed by extensive buying from various sources, it is said.

It is reported that a great number of shop-use orders for cars are in the market for Missouri Pacific. Evidently the shortage is said to exhibit signs of nervousness and could be supplied fast enough precipitately with a little effective management. Missouri Pacific may be brought to bear by the bulls before long.

Occasional spurts of strength in the copper shares and greater activity in the Boston Curb are reminders of the recent moderate improvement in the copper metal market. Sales agents say there has been an increase in both domestic and foreign orders and that the advance in price has been abundantly justified by the keener demand.

Cotton Manufacturer Declares the Defeat of Frothingham Will Establish Industry on Healthy Footing

Mr. Walter H. Langshaw, head of the Dartmouth Mills in New Bedford, is one of the most successful cotton manufacturers in the world. His rise has challenged the attention of all men who know his history and the history of his enterprise. He is the master of whatever affects his business, and the tariff on cotton affects all cotton manufacturers.

There is, therefore, no higher authority upon the effect of the tariff on cotton manufacturing than Mr. Langshaw. Mr. Langshaw's opinion on this question would certainly be without prejudice against his own business and without prejudice against the Republican party, of which he is a member, and without prejudice against the theory of protection, in which he is a believer.

This is what Mr. Langshaw says concerning the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill passed by the recent stand-pat Congress and approved by President Taft:

"The Payne-Aldrich bill, with its increased duties on high grade cotton goods, has been the cause of an unnatural and unhealthy expansion of cotton manufacturing in Massachusetts. The effect upon the employes already upon the ground has been unfavorable because practically all the employes of the new mills have been imported and their presence in the country in connection with overproduction has operated simply to bring an additional element of competition into the labor market."

Mr. Langshaw has a decided opinion upon the effect of the election of Mr. Frothingham on the cotton industry of this State. He says that the "defeat of Mr. Frothingham is the only thing needed to put the industry in the way of an early recovery and establish it upon a permanently healthy footing.

"A gradual and impartial reduction of the tariff all along the line is absolutely indispensable," he declares, "and this can never be brought about except by the overthrow of the corrupt trading combine which now dominates the Republican party. The Democratic success in Massachusetts this year would almost immediately bring that result about, and then a general reduction of the tariff upon fair lines, free from favoritism and log-rolling, would soon be accomplished."

Mr. Langshaw decleres that the great evil of excessive production is that it leads to economic waste. The hunger for tariff graft incites men to rush into business protected by an excessive tariff who are not fitted to conduct it upon the most skilful and business-like methods. The consequence is that it costs more to produce cotton goods than it ought to cost, and the working people have to pay the penalty.

The net result of the high protective tariff is thus not protection to the American workingmen from the competition of goods made by cheap foreign labor, but actual exposure of the working people in the cotton factories to the direct competition of foreign labor which is imported here to take the places of those who are already here.

The general result is that the community pays a higher price for its cotton goods and has in its midst a body of working people whose standard of living is lower than the American standard, an evil of great significance to us all.

Mr. Langshaw's Dartmouth mills have paid a larger profit than any other cotton factories in Massachusetts. Governor Foss has invested a large part of his great fortune in a new cotton mill at East Boston. Does anybody believe that these two men want to hurt their own business?

Who do the working people of the cotton mills believe ought to know best what is in the highest interest of the cotton mills in this State—Governor Foss and Mr. Langshaw or Senator Lodge or Mr. Frothingham, neither of whom ever supported themselves by their own efforts, nor have had any business experience in cotton manufacturing or in anything else.

A most extraordinary test of the degree of success with which the stand-pat Republicans are meeting in their appeals to the selfish interests of the workingmen of this State was afforded at the four noonday rallies held by Candidate Frothingham in the shoe city of Haverhill.

The Republican speakers stopped first at Washington square and had as an audience about twenty-five people, some of whom were women and most of whom were for Foss. At the conclusion of Mr. Frothingham's speech they cheered for the Democratic candidate for Governor.

At the next place where speaking was scheduled there were but five people present and no rally was held.

At the next place also, on Main street, the absence of an audience prevented any speaking.

At the fourth and last place, where it was intended that Mr. Frothingham should enlighten the ignorant and frighten the timid, neither ignorant nor timid in the form of men or women were present.

It is plain that the day has passed when reactionaries like Lodge and Frothingham can stampede American workingmen by doctored statistics and untruthful predictions of calamity.

The Bugs of Fall

By BERTON BRALEY

THE FOOTBALL BUG.

THIS Football Bug begins his rule
When college boys return to school;
There are two species of the brute—
The bugs who play and those who root.
The player bug is thick of thewa,
With strength and zest he loves to use
In trampling on his foe with vim
(Unless his foe should tramp on him).
With padded armor on his frame
He sallies forth to play the game;
He may not wade in blood and gore
As in the glorious days of yore,
But still his lusty style of play
Makes timid people faint away;
While stouter mortals "watch the ball,"
And cheer the "grandest game of all."
The Rooter Bug is crazy quite,
He's full of vocal dynamite.
He yells and howls with fearful force,
He cheers and shouts till he is hoarse,
He hops, he leaps at each advance,
He does a wild barbaric dance,
He smashes hats, he flutters flags,
He tears his vocal chords to rags,
And if his team is winner—well,
The Rooter Bug just raises hell.

Now if the rooter bug's a girl,
She's right amid the busy swirl,
And though her voice is far more shrill,
Her rooting lacks not strength or skill,
And—so at least, the rumor saith—
She loves the Player Bug to death!
Who cares for mollycoddles smug!
I'd rather be a Football Bug!

Marvels of Heat

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

ALL physical science teaches that all particles of all apparently solid bodies, such as iron, stone, wood, lead, etc., composed of electrons, atoms and molecules are in intensely rapid oscillation to and fro. This motion is known to be a fact, although none of these minute bodies can be seen in any microscope. How they became known to scientists cannot be told in this place.

Take a bar of steel; its temperature if placed in a room whose temperature is 60 degrees will soon be 60 degrees. The molecules will be flying this way and that in every conceivable direction through exceedingly short distances, but these distances are very great in proportion to the ultra-microscopic diameters of the atoms or eyan of the molecules.

This motion inside of solids also exists in liquids and even gases when they are inclosed in a container without an opening. For if there is an aperture, however minute, even if only the diameter of one molecule, the gas will all escape, which is a most wonderful thing—any gas will thus pass out in any direction. Liquids would only flow out through a hole in the bottom or sides, but always below the surface of the liquid.

This entire doctrine of molecular motions within all matter is called the kinetic theory; from kinetic, a Greek word meaning "to move" in English. When kinetic laws were established the mental horizon of man was greatly expanded. The bar of steel if left in the air at 60 degrees, if left there long enough, will be at 60 degrees in every part, even in the centre. And the motions within will be those of steel at 60. Now apply heat, a flame for instance, at one end. The molecules of steel will increase their rates of swing and also the distances through which they move to and fro. Soon the end of the bar will be as "hot as the fire," and then a wonderful process will appear, the heat will travel to the other end of the bar.

The scientific name of heat is "a mode of motion." But the steel bar will expand and become longer, and in this lengthening it can push a weight of many tons along. That mode of motion becomes a mighty force. And mode of motion in the sun is able to dominate the gigantic machine, the entire solar system of planets, moons and comets, instead of holding a flame against the end of the steel bar or putting the end in a fire of coals, as in a forge, connect a wire to each end and let these wires run to the poles of a low pressure, but great volume of current of electricity dynamo. Turn on the switch; soon the steel will begin to warm, then let, then hotter; then it will begin to give out dull red light, then brighten; then white, next still whiter. Soon the bar will sag down, break and fall.

But put the bar at first into a corundum tube able to resist terrific heat. The bar will turn into a boiling liquid, and by suitable means the whole bar can be made to vaporize into gas.

Heat will pass through a lens made of ice and strike up a fire at the focus. A mistake. Energy from the sun passed through the ice and was drawn to a focus on matter which was able to receive it and appropriate it as heat. You can separate heat from light and use each separately and do many wonderful things with both these totally unknown forces in a suitable laboratory. Unknown is used here purposely, for nothing is now known as to what anything really is.

The Educated Cattle

By BERTON BRALEY

I WAS punchin' cows one season, as I'm very proud to state,
On a ranch whose wealthy owner was a Harvard graduate,
An' the punchers he selected, 'cept a couple o' guys like me,
Was a lot of college students that had taken their degree.
So we taught 'em cattle punchin' an' they taught us classic Greek,
An' we spent the evenin's learnin' of the proper way to speak
When addressin' cows in Latin or in Arabic an' such,
An' we learned to swear in Sanscrit, which amused us very much.

They filled us full of Horace an' of Mr. Virgil, too,
Till our heads was fairly bustin' with the Latin that we knew,
An' we used to sing the cattle little odes that Horace wrote,
Which the same was very soothin' if you struck the proper note.
When we went to town for pleasure an' some pretty lofty jinks,
We was allus usin' Latin as we ordered up our drinks,
Though the people thought us loco an' plum crazy in the head
When we talked to 'em in language which was lively though 'twas dead.

Now the p'int of this here story is a simple one to tell.
Them cattle learned to listen when they heard a Latin yell;
But the calves they had that season wouldn't take a single stride
Unless we wore a toga an' a laurel wreath beside.
So we had to dress like Horace, which is most amazin' hard
When your pony's kind of skittish an' a buckin' nasty, pard,
But at last we got 'em herded in a manner that would suit
An' we coaxed 'em through the gateway by a-playin' on a lute.

Says the owner: "This is classic," as we went an' closed the gates.
"But I ain't a raisin' cattle to be college graduates,
So hereafter we'll punch cattle speakin' plain United States."

This has a MORAL, but is NO FABLE, says Mr. T. E. Powers:

"Once there was a Little Gloom who Worked very Hard and every week he put a Couple of Dollars in the Bank, and when he was Old he had enough money to Retire and Buy a Home, but he remained just as Gloomy as Ever. And once there was a Little Joy who was Awfully Lazy, and whenever he got any Money he Blew it In, and when he was Old he was Dead Busted, but he was just as Happy as Ever. Moral: It's a Queer World." Don't miss Mr. Powers's pictures illustrating this fable in
